First reactions to Carter proposals

Strong pressures on welfare package

WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be strong pressures in and out of Congress to change some aspects of President Carter's proposed new welfare system, although its objectives are widely approved, according to first reactions to the sweeping program.

The plan Carter unveiled in a broadcast news conference in Plains, Ga., was not accepted in full by either of the two chairmen of the congressional committees that will have the most to do with shaping the legislation.

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he has one major difference with Carter, centering on the way in which the income of working families who still need help would be supplemented. Ullman said this should be done outside the welfare system in a way not related to family size.

Less specifically, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said "There will be a great deal of study and a lot of suggestions of ways the President's proposal can be improved." He said, however, Carter had accepted some of his suggestions and the announced plan is an improvement over earlier versions.

The chairmen joined other congressional leaders in promising prompt action to have an improved system in effect next year.

Black leaders, including NAACP chairman Margaret Bush Wilson and National Urban League executive director Vernon Jordan, said they were encouraged by parts of Carter's program but saw a need for changes.

The NAACP leader said she was pleased by provisions for creating more jobs, including part-time work, and increasing the earned income tax credit as an incentive to the working poor.

But she said "Work incentives should not paralyze the poor. They should instead relieve the burden of poverty while providing meaningful jobs for those able to work. The need for readily available day care centers for mothers wanting to work should be adequately met."

She also said the proposal to reduce welfare burdens on local governments does not go far enough — "it should completely relieve local governments of the responsibility for income supplement payments and the states should be made to assume this obligation."

Jordan, who recently criticized Carter as not doing enough for blacks and the urban poor, said the league would cooperate in efforts to improve the President's welfare program.

"We continue to believe a national full employment policy, separated from welfare, should be instituted and that the basic thrust of income assistance programs should be through the refundable credit income tax," Jordan said. "This would remedy major defects in the reform package."

Rep. James C. Corman, D-Calif., chairman of the Ways and Means subcommitee with immediate responsibility for the legislation, said he expects the basic plan to be approved. He said hearings will begin next month and will continue even after Congress itself adjourns for the year.

Dissents came from some Republicans. Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., senior minority member of the Finance Committee, calling the plan a travesty, said "The working men and women across America want fewer people on welfare and not millions more." He said Carter, "in yet one more vital area has been totally and completely captured by the federal bureaucrats."

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., predicted a long, hard struggle in Congress and said the cost of the program would be tough for taxpayers to accept. He said Republicans will develop alternative proposals.

In California, Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said the welfare revision was "long overdue" and predicted that property owners in his county could get a one-fourth reduction in their taxes if the program becomes law.

State officials in New York said Carter's program could mean a 36 per cent reduction in the welfare expenses of state and local governments.

There was mixed reaction to Carter's program from women's groups.

Carol Burris, president of the Women's Lobby, criticized the provision designed to encourage welfare recipients to accept private rather than public service jobs.

"Women, especially minority women, have often been discriminated against in private employment," she said. "Many women are on welfare because of discrimination in private employment.

Van Houten mistrial declared

Jobs, cash main thrust of Carter welfare plan

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter asked Congress on Saturday to junk the welfare system and replace it with a $34 billion plan that moves able-bodied recipients into jobs and provides cash for those who can't work.

But Carter told a nationally broadcast news conference that neither he nor his Cabinet experts could say when the new system would achieve its ultimate goal of actually reducing the total amount of money the American people pay for welfare.

The President also said the proposed reforms failed to meet his goal of being no more expensive initially than the old welfare system.

He expressed confidence that Congress would enact his program by next spring to become fully effective in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1980. He minimized his differences with key congressional committee chairmen and praised House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill for agreeing to set up a special welfare committee to handle the legislation.

The President told the news conference the current system "is antiwork and antifamily, unfair to the poor and wasteful to taxpayers' dollars . . . There is no perfect solution for these difficult problems, but it is time to begin.

He said that his sytem "stresses the fundamental American commitment to work, strengthens the family, respects the less advantaged in our society and makes a far more efficient and effective use of our hard-earned tax dollars."

Carter's proposal makes several major concessions to mayors, civil rights groups and other interest groups which had been consulted by the administration during the drafting of the plan.

The most surprising of these was his decision to discard his stated goal of keeping his proposed new system from being more expensive initially than the old one.

He said the new system would increase the spending by $2.8 billion over the $27.9 billion cost he attributed to the old system. However, this spending increase did not include an additional $3.3 billion cost of new tax credits for wage-earners who now pay some income tax.

Furthermore, his $27.9 billion figure included the cost of a number of programs not generally regarded as welfare by the public, such as a $5.5 billion public service job program that he hopes to eliminate.

The President outlined these major proposals:

— No work will be required for the aged, blind, disabled or single parents of children under age 7. They will be eligible for $4,200 a year for a family of four.

— Part-time work which does not interfere with child care will be expected of single parents with children aged 7 to 14. A family of four in this category would have its $4,200 annual payment reduced 50 cents for each dollar earned.

— Full-time work would be expected of two-parent families, single persons, childless couples, and single parents with no child under age 14 if the jobs are available. Whether work is available or not, a family of four in this category would get $2,300 a year. If work is available, they would lose 50 cents from the $2,300 welfare payment for each dollar of earnings above $3,800.

— Up to 1.4 million public service jobs in state and local government would be created at or slightly above the $2.30 an hour minimum wage.

— To encourage employment in private jobs, expanded tax credits would be available to low and modest income workers up to a maximum of well over $600 a year for a family of four. These would apply to persons working in private jobs or in public jobs not subsidized by the federal government.

The minimum payments for those who would work and those not expected to work amount to a modified guaranteed annual income. Part of the tax credit provision amounts to a modified negative income tax, because $1.5 billion in tax credits would take the form of cash payments to persons who earn too little to pay any income tax.

In his financing of the new program, Carter rejected a suggestion that welfare benefits be reduced for tenants of subsidized housing. This had drawn strong protests from the housing industry and mayors.

He said he planned to use $1.3 billion in revenue from his proposed $10 billion crude oil wellhead tax to help pay for welfare. This tax, designed to bring the price of domestic oil up to the world market price, has already been approved by two House committees in a format that would easily allow it to be used in this manner.

Carter counted $300 million in increased Social Security contributions toward the costs of the $8.8 billion employment component of the new system. Because of the way these funds are accounted for, this amounts to giving welfare recipients $300 million in cash payments and taking that same sum back from them in Social Security taxes.

JURY COULDN'T DECIDE

Leslie Van Houten, looking dispondent, peers through the window of sheriff's car taking her back to jail after a judge declared a mistrial on her retrial of murder charges in the deaths of Leno and Rosemary La Bianca in 1969.

Manson disciple retrial ends in jury deadlock

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge declared a mistrial Saturday in Leslie Van Houten's retrial on murder charges when the jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked in the case of the former Charles Manson disciple.

Jury foreman Bill Albee reported that the jury, in its last vote, was split 7-5 with seven favoring a first-degree murder conviction and five voting for conviction on manslaughter charges.

The 27-year-old Miss Van Houten, who could have won parole if convicted of manslaughter, appeared dejected when the mistrial was announced by Superior Court Judge Edward Hinz.

She seemed shaken earlier in the day when she came to court clad in a bright pink skirt and floral blouse, her hair in a topknot.

Her attorney, Maxwell Keith, had said earlier he would be pleased with a hung jury. "Worse things could happen," he said.

The jury had deliberated 25 days over a four-week period. The trial itself lasted 15 weeks, and it now appeared that Miss Van Houten could face a third trial.

The judge set Sept. 12 for a hearing to set a new trial date.

Both Keith and Miss Van Houten appeared stunned when they heard that five of the jurors had voted for manslaughter, the lowest degree of conviction they could have chosen.

"I was pleasantly surprised," Keith told reporters. "I didn't expect that so many would vote for manslaughter."

Asked how his client had reacted, he said, "She gasped."

Keith said he was not hesitant to defend her again in a new trial. "I'll be better; I've had practice," he said.

Asked what the strongest point of his defense was, Keith said, "I hope it was Leslie. It appeared that way."

Miss Van Houten, who once obeyed all orders given by cult leader Charles Manson, was convicted with him and two other women in a 1971 trial which attracted worldwide publicity. At that trial, the defendants presented no defense for their actions.

Only Miss Van Houten received a new trial because her attorney, Ronald Hughes, died on a camping trip during the first trial.

Keith, the grey-haired attorney who later took over her defense, mounted a strong argument at the second trial. He claimed that Miss Van Houten was not in her right mind when she went along on a mission of murder led by Manson.

Brother held in shooting of sister

A 10-year-old Pomona girl was shot in the chest at her apartment Saturday, and police are holding her 27-year-old brother in connection with the shooting.

The victim, Cheryl Goodson of 1304 Packard Drive, was reported in critical condition at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Her brother, Charles John Goodson III, was booked by police on suspicion of attempted murder, according to Lt. Chris Wiebelt.

Wiebelt said officers at first thought the shooting was accidental, but because of conflicting stories being told by Goodson, they are now uncertain.

Wiebelt said the victim was shot while lying on her brother's bed about 3:15 p.m. The weapon used was a .38 caliber revolver.

The girl has not been questioned by officers, Wiebelt added, so it is uncertain as to exactly what occurred.

The victim's father and mother were out at the time of the shooting.

Agreement reached on three-year pact

No nationwide phone strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide telephone strike by 700,000 employes of the Bell System was averted Saturday night by a series of contract agreements shortly before the midnight strike deadline.

The tentative settlements, subject to rank-and-file ratification, would provide a 31 per cent increase in wages and benefits, union officials said.

President Glenn E. Watts of the Communications Workers of America, the largest of the unions with 500,000 Bell System employes, said the settlement was "in line with recent agreements in the steel and auto industries."

Other similar agreements covered 120,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and 70,000 members of the Telecommunications International Union.

The final group to settle represented 50,000 IBEW-represented employesof Western Electric, the manufacturing unit of the Bell System. That agreement was announced only two minutes before the strike deadline.

The agreement with the CWA was reached after federal mediators joined the virtual around-the-clock negotiations.

"This $3.3 billion agreement touches on every significant demand that this union's policymaking body said that we must come to grips with in 1977," Watts said.

He said the agreement was reached through a "negotiating breakthrough" achieved after he called a news conference Thursday to say a strike was almost inevitable.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., parent firm of the Bell System, said it was "gratified" by the new pact. "We believe it is a good wage and benefit package," AT&T said in a statement.

Announcing the new pact, Watts said, "I believe that we have achieved a remarkable settlement — particularly in view of the recent down-trend in the size of new labor-management contracts and the general sluggishness of the economy."

Asked whether consumers' phone bills will go up as a result of the settlement, Watts said, "I don't have any doubt that the telephone companies will have to go for rate increases." But he added that most of the reason for this is increases in other costs to the Bell System.

Under the three-year agreement, which still must be ratified by the CWA members, wage increases will amount to 7.9 per cent this year, 7.07 per cent next year and 6.68 per cent in 1979.

For example, the average telephone operator's salary will go from $209 to $257 a week.

Child abuse hotline inaugurated in county

A toll-free hotline to intercept or prevent child abuse has been established throughout Los Angeles County.

Valley residents who witness or know of any local child beating or molestation are urged to telephone 213-ZE-1234.

Trained child abuse specialists will be on call 24 hours a day seven days a week, and the caller may remain anonymous, if he chooses, according to Supervisor James Hayes, whose efforts gave birth to the project.

Hayes estimates that about 250,000 children are abused or neglected throughout the county, several hundred in the Pomona area annually.

"I found in my study of the growing problem of child abuse that a lack of trained staff at a central location has resulted in public confusion of what to do about such cases," he explained. "Now that people have someone to call, we hope to make some progress."

The progress includes not only intervention and possible prosecution, but also education, the supervisor added.

A call to the Zenith number will bring immediate response, Hayes said. The calls will be routed to specialists in the areas where the abuses are taking place.

Special training will be provided for social workers, probation officers, peace officers and others so that they can develop more understanding in handling child abuse problems. Expanded courses in family life and parental responsibilities also will be offered in the schools.

The project will be coordinated by an Inter-Agency Council on Child Abuse and Neglect. The commission's membership includes top officials from the district attorney's office, the sheriff's department, local police, welfare department social workers, and other agencies in the field.

"This is the first coordinated program to involve all county agencies and volunteers in an all-out attack on child abuse," Hayes declared. "By next week the entire program will be in operation."

A welfare reform aim: preserving the family

Carter program offers 2-parent unit support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Saturday he wants to strengthen and preserve the family with his proposed welfare changes.

Too often, he said, the present system has shattered the family by providing financial incentives for fathers to leave home so the family could get higher benefits.

With few exceptions, families with both parents at home don't qualify for welfare benefits now.

This led to the infamous "man-in-the-house" rule: a family can lose its welfare support if the father is found at home. In some cases, a family where one parent works at a $2.30 an hour minimum-wage job and gets food stamps and other supplemental benefits, the family will make more money if the father leaves.

At his news conference, Carter told of one such situation.

"In Michigan, a two-parent family with the father working at the minimum wage has a total income, including tax credits and food stamps, of $5,922," Carter said. "But if the father leaves, the family will be eligible for benefits totaling $7,076."

Carter did not spell out what would happen to that same family if his plan were adopted. But he said that "the primary purpose of this program is to make it always profitable" for a family member to take a job rather than rely on government cash payments.

In contrast to the prevalent "man-in-the-house" penalty on families where the man remains at home, the Carter program would provide basic income support for two-parent families.

The principal wage earner in the family would be required to take a job if one is available.

A two-parent family with two children would get a basic benefit of $2,300. One of the parents would be required to work but the basic income supplement would continue until more than $3,800 is earned. This would provide a possible total of $6,100 in combined federal and private income for the family of four.

The federal income supplement would begin to be phased out when the wage-earner's salaries passes $3,800. The income subsidy would be reduced by 50 cents for each $1 earned until the outside earnings total $8,400. Then the family would be phased out of the welfare program altogether.

A full income subsidy of $4,200 a year would be provided for two-parent families where one parent is incapacitated and there are young children.

There is sure to be a controversy about the proposal to require the "principal wage earner" to take an outside job in a two-parent family. Only one of the parents will be eligible for the public service jobs to be created.

The government expects creation of the proposed 1.4 million public service jobs and training positions will take some time. Because of this, it has ordered that the jobs be spread around to one per family.

Women's groups nave pointed out, however, that "principal wage earner" will automatically be construed to be men by most program planners. They contend that this could shut out low-income women from job opportunities when they already have a more difficult time than men in finding work.

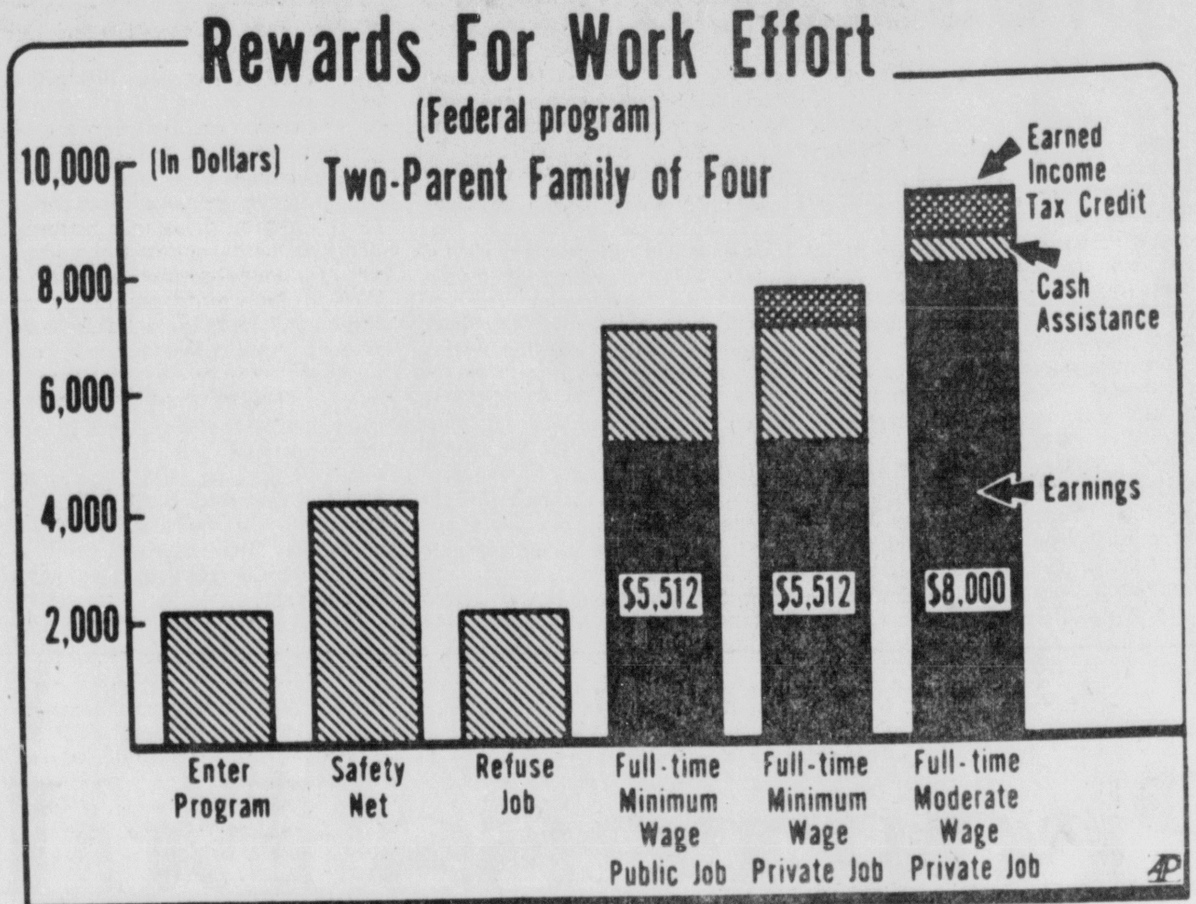
The program also would protect women with small children, requiring them to take outside jobs only if their children are at least 7 years old and then only on a part-time basis if the children are between 7 and 13 unless adequate child care is available.

The initial version called for mothers with children 13 or under to stay home and take care of them, rather than seek an outside job. Pressure from Senate Finance Chairman Russell Long, D-La., and from women's groups persuaded Carter to change this.

Carol Burris, president of the Women's Lobby, applauded the change, saying that without such a provision women would lose work experience and be unemployable when their children are older and they seek outside jobs.

Some persons, especially Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., have pushed for funds for child care centers to be provided as part of the welfare plan.

Carter made no mention of this. He did say, however, that single-parent family heads can deduct up to 20 per cent of their earned income — up to $150 a month — for child care expenses if this frees them to take a job outside the home.



THE PRESIDENT'S WELFARE REFORMS

Graph illustrates possible effects on the income of a two-parent family of four under proposals outlined by President Carter Saturday. Carter said the program would be called a Program for Better Jobs and Income because there is a stigma in the word "welfare."

Strong work requirements basic in welfare revision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Strong work requirements for every adult except the aged, the disabled and single parents of young children are at the heart of President Carter's $34billion welfare plan. And about $8.8 billion of that amount would go to insure that jobs are available.

The program would involve the financing of 1.4 million public service jobs and training positions in 1981, for which some 2.5 million people would be hired. Some jobs would be divided for part-time workers.

The jobs proposal would apply not only to current welfare recipients, but also many lowincome people not now eligible for welfare.

The public service posts would pay the prevailing minimum wage but could be supplemented by other components of the welfare plan to guarantee that families with one parent able to work receive an income at least 13 per cent above the 1981 poverty line. For a family of four, the line is now drawn at $5,080.

Parents who find jobs in the private sector would have their incomes supplemented, if necessary, to a point 20 per cent above the poverty line.

The proposal would abolish current employment projects under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act and the Work Incentive (WIN) program of the Labor Department. Labor would also administer the jobs component of the new welfare plan.

Carter, in his message to Congress on Saturday, called the current welfare system "anti-work and anti-family."

Here's how the jobs component would work:

ELIGIBILITY

If there is more than one adult in the family, the public service job or training slot would go to the principal wage earner.

Part-time work would be made available to single parents with children aged 6 to 13. Single parents with children under six could also take parttime jobs if they desire.

Any applicant for a public service job would have to have been unemployed and have searched for a private job for at least five weeks prior to being placed in a subsidized post.

After one year in a subsidized job, the participant must again search for up to five weeks for a job in the private sector. Then he or she could be eligible to return to public employment.

The applicant must accept a private job paying the minimum wage or better if one is offered during the search periods.

There are no income or assets tests for determining eligibility.

WAGES

In states with higher minimum wages, the state rates will apply.

Job sponsors will be allowed to pay wages up to 25 per cent higher than the minimum to "work leaders" whose numbers cannot exceed 15 per cent of the subsidized work force.

The government will pay sponsors an amount equal to 30 per cent more than the workers' base wages to cover overhead.

PARTICIPANTS

Up to 1.4 million work and training slots would be created. About 300,000 of those would be for part-time workers. The jobs would serve up to 2.5 million people who would participate for at least part of any given year.

All low-income families with children will be eligible, regardless of whether they are currently receiving welfare.

Based on computer models, 51 per cent will be men. About 13 per cent will be people receiving food stamps but not currently on welfare, and 44 per cent will be those who now receive neither food stamps nor payments for dependent children. Food stamps would be abolished under the Carter plan.

Fire damages Valinda home

Fire of undetermined origin caused $18,000 in damages to a Valinda home Saturday morning.

The blaze at 1073 Ahern Drive at 1:45 a.m. also caused minor damages to the north portion of a home at 1067 Ahern, according to sheriff's deputies.

Robert Pickering, occupant of the home at 1073 Ahern, was not home when the fire broke out.

Carter, Plains reunion

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Jimmy Carter, a Baptist, plans to attend a family reunion at the First United Methodist Church in his hometown Sunday afternoon. But there was some question whether he would attend Sunday church services as he usually does.

Earlier, he was quoted as saying he and his wife Rosalynn might attend Methodist services which would avoid the problem of which Baptist church to attend, since the church he used to belong to has split in a racial dispute.

But there will be no worship at the First United Methodist, which holds services only on the second and fourth Sundays of each month.

Carter is a member of the First Baptist Church in Washington.

The two Baptist churches here are the Plains Baptist Church, where he was a member before his inauguration, and the Maranatha Baptist Church, formed by members who broke away from the other church last spring after the racial incident.

The rift dates back to last fall, when a black minister from nearby Albany, the Rev. Clennon King, attempted to join the Plains Baptist Church shortly before the presidential election, but was barred from entering by deacons who cited a 1965 church resolution prohibiting blacks from joining.

"I don't know what he's going to do," said Chip Carter, the President's 27-year-old son, relaxing in the office of the Carter family peanut warehouse with his uncle, Billy.

"Maybe he'll just go outside the house and gather all the Secret Service agents around him for a prayer meeting the way he usually does," he added.

The Carters arrived here Friday to attend the wedding of Mrs. Carter's brother, Murray Smith, to 26-year-old Helen Donnan.

The President's mother, Mrs. Lillian Carter, has solved the problem by attending a church in nearby Americus.

But another member of the Carter family, state Sen. Hugh Carter, the President's cousin, was instrumental in the formation of the Maranatha church.

Sen. Carter said he hoped Carter would choose to attend the Maranatha church Sunday. Most Plains residents "realize the position he's in," he said. "But I for one will be disappointed if he doesn't attend the Maranatha."

With Carter's support, the Plains Baptist Church later voted to rescind the resolution and placed King under a "watch-care" committee. His petition for membership was turned down in January.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Bruce Edwards, also supported the admission of blacks, and survived a move to have him fired in November.

But he resigned in February after his supporters failed to postpone action on a new motion to dismiss him.

"I've always been bold in my preaching that the church doors should be always open and the gospel is for everyone," Edwards said at the time. "But I've never met any resistance like I met in Plains."

Edwards, 30, since has accepted a post at a church in Hawaii.

Campbell's bill to legalize Laetrile headed for debate

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Senate Bill 245, better known as the Laetrile Bill, will be considered Monday by the state Assembly Health Committee.

The bill, introduced by Sen. William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights, would allow the use and manufacture of the substance extracted from apricot pits as a treatment for cancer patients.

The legalization of Laetrile, also known as vitamin 17 or amygdalin, is being opposed by the California Medical Association, the American Cancer Society and the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Campbell has supported the bill under the "freedom of choice" motive.

The Cancer Society's California Division disputes this stand.

A Cancer Society spokesman said, "Legislators who stampeded under a freedom of choice banner thus deprived their constituents of a specific protection of federal law, the same protection which kept the tragedy of thalidomide from happening in the United States."

In the past few months, several states have legalized the use of Laetrile with legislators stating that the public should have the right to "try anything which is not harmful" in the battle against cancer.

FDA Commissioner Dr. Donald Kennedy has called Laetrile a "fraud" that lacks any evidence of effectiveness.

"Cancer patients who buy Laetrile are being victimized twice — once by their disease and once by the profiteers," said Dr. Kennedy.

FDA has just finished a review of all evidence about Laetrile, including materials submitted by its proponents, and has concluded the drug is not generally recognized by medical experts as being safe and effective cancer treatment, Dr. Kennedy added.

"To the contrary, all of the evidence shows that both now and in the past Laetrile has been regarded by the overwhelming majority of qualified experts as being of unproved safety and of no effectiveness whatsoever," he continued.

Dr. Kennedy testified before the Senate Subcommittee on Health and Scientific Research, which is holding hearings on Laetrile.

The commissioner dealt with the "freedom of choice" issue — in which the Laetrile proponents have argued that patients should be able to select whatever medical treatment they want, whether it works or not.

"I do not believe that anyone has the right to debase the concept of freedom by swindling those who are desperate for their lives," he said.

"I do not believe that we should permit Laetrile to destroy a drug efficiency system that ensures free, informed choice among products that work. The 'freedom' to promote Laetrile untimately destroys every citizen's right to make intelligent choices."

Dr. Kennedy added, "Because it is such a dreaded and baffling disease, cancer has always been a seed bed for quackery."

The California Division of the American Cancer Society says the tide of Laetrilomania which swept the country a short time ago now seems to be receding as journalists and legislators take a closer second look at the problem.

"Until a little girl in upstate New York swallowed a few of her daddy's court-ordered Laetrile tablets a few weeks ago, it was argued that Laetrile should be allowed because it is 'harmless.' Her death put an end to this claim by demonstrating what experts on toxicity had vainly tried to show — Laetrile isn't 'nontoxic' at all," said the society spokesman this week

Gunman robs Upland restaurant

Upland police are today searching for a man who robbed Oliver's restaurant, 1869 W. Foothill Blvd., Friday about 11:30 p.m.

Police said the gunman approached the cashier demanding money and threatening her with a 4 to 6-inch blue steel revolver.

Police said the robber was described as a white male adult approximately 5 feet, 8 inches tall weighing about 145 pounds with shoulder-length black hair. When last seen he was wearing a blue and white cardigan, blue pants and blue and white jogging shoes.

Police said the robber made his escape in a tan Volkswagon sedan with the right rear light out.

Winchell's in Pomona robbed

A lone gunman robbed a Pomona doughnut shop of a small amount of cash early Saturday and then fled on foot, police said.

Officers reported the man entered Winchell's Donut House at 773 N. Indian Hill Blvd. about 1:45 a.m. and bought one doughnut.

He left the shop but returned later and pointed a chrome-plated four-inch revolver at the clerk and demanded money.

The robber was described as black, about 25 years old, 5-7, 180 pounds, and wearing an Afro hairdo.

Fires rage west of Rockies; Alaska forests, tundra hit

By The Associated Press

A 70,000-acre fire dubbed "Scarface" roared toward two smaller blazes Saturday, threatening to produce an inferno covering 100,000 acres in California's timberland. Every other state west of the Rockies had major fires, and in Alaska more than 1.5 million acres were ablaze.

Alaska's forest and tundra fires were on a scale far larger than those in the Lower 48 states. One fire alone engulfed 335,000 acres.

But about 95 per cent of the land was tundra rather than forest, and the vastness of Alaska's wilderness softened the impact on people.

In California, where nearly 200,000 acres were ablaze by Saturday, fires were threatening timberland and the watersheds on which cities, industry and agriculture rely.

Water is already scarce. Most of the fires were started by lightning strikes in tinderdry woods earlier in the week.

The huge fire, in northern California's Modoc County, was ravaging sparsely populated timberland in the mountainous northeastern corner of the state near Oregon.

It was so big that firemen gave it a name — "Scarface" — as they watched it swallow two smaller fires and move toward a second pair.

One nearby fire already covered 15,000 acres, the other 2,500 acres. It was estimated that if the three fires merged over the area now separating them, nearly 100,000 acres would be involved.

And, said Brian Barrette of the California Department of Forestry, "We don't know when it's going to stop."

"The winds picked up and all the fires came together," said Nancy Gardner of the U.S. Forest Service. "This thing's really taking off ... It's really frightening to see those big trees go up, poof. It's so dry they burn up almost instantly."

Throughout the state, nearly 10,000 firefighters were on the line — many of them from out of state. The drain on nearby states' resources began to tell, as officials in Arizona had trouble finding enough men to fight a fire on an Indian reservation near the Grand Canyon.

More than 90 per cent of the land on fire outside of Alaska was in California. In south-central Oregon, meanwhile, a fire was consuming ponderosa and fir timber, and about 75 small lightning fires had been reported in Oregon and Washington.

California's second largest blaze was in the Marble-Cone area, virtually inaccessible terrain in Los Padres National Forest east of Big Sur on the central California coast. It continued unchecked, with more than 57,000 acres ravaged and 2,800 firefighters at work.

Kathy Ross of the state forestry department said watershed loss was estimated at $113 million from the Marble-Cone fire alone. If heavy rains should come to that area later this year, the burned-out land could trigger mudslides that would endanger seaside homes.

Strong winds blew off some fog that had hampered aircraft carrying fire retardants over the Marble-Cone blaze, but they also fed fresh air to the fire, enabling it to burn even faster.

Most of the California fires were caused by a lightning storm earlier in the week. The state listed 776 known fires on state-protected land since Monday, and the U.S. Forest Service counted 376 on federal land in the past two weeks.

Losses are estimated in the $700 million range.

In Peach Springs, Ariz., meanwhile, a fire on the Hualapai Indian Reservation near the Grand Canyon National Park charred at least 3,100 acres of sage brush, grass land and pine.

Officials were trying to locate enough crews to fight it, because many fire fighters had already gone to California.

"Containment on this fire isn't even estimated," an official said, but he said neither the park nor any structures were threatened.

In Alaska, 1,246 people were fighting 47 fires that were burning areas totaling an equivalent of more than twice the land in Rhode Island. Fires were within 10 miles of at least 11 Alaskan villages, out had not reached any.

$10,055 burglary in Montclair

A Montclair residence was burglarized Friday with thieves running off with an estimated $10,055 worth of jewelry and money.

Montclair police are withholding details of the burglary and would only say the burglary occurred in a residence on Monte Vista Avenue sometime between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Friday.

Police said the unknown persons gained entry through a window of the home and proceeded to go through the bedroom drawers removing numerous pieces of jewelry and money.

Carries lessons to kids

Buffalo program helps to plug children into learning

By BEN DE FOREST
Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Karen Nadrich, 13, does her homework sitting in front of her family's television set. But unlike most kids who keep one eye on the TV and one on the books, her whole learning program is communicating with the TV.

With a special keyboard on her lap, the television asks her questions and she answers. When she answers right, she gets reinforcement. When she's wrong, the screen flashes the words: "Your answer is wrong, Karen. Try again."

Karen, who suffers from a crippling back ailment, is one of 150 youngsters in suburban Amherst in a pilot program of instruction via cable television and computerized lessons. The three-year-old program, funded by the state, allows mentally and physically disabled children to learn at home, in connection with counselling by teachers.

Karen was confined to her home following surgery.

"She was completely bored," her mother said Then the family heard about the TV instruction, called Tel-Catch, and Karen now spends about three hours a day learning on the computer.

During one recent study session, the screen asked:

"What is the longest part of the alimentary canal (digestive tract): a-the esophagus, b-the stomach, c-the small intestine, or d-the large intestine? She picked "a."

"Your answer is wrong, Karen. Try again."

She then correctly picked "c", the small intestine. The TV set told her she was correct, then went on to another question.

When children get tired of questions, they can switch to a game of electronic tic-tac-toe. Another favorite game is trying to land a rocket on the moon.

The program involves more than children and computers. It includes teachers, who vary the amount of time they spend with each child, and parents, who can work with their youngsters.

"As far as we're concerned, we think it's very advantageous," said Mrs. Stanley Nadrich. "It is stimulating and Karen can keep up with her studies. She can do it at home and go at her own pace."

At Gateway, a home for emotionally disturbed youngsters, about 60 children have access to four television sets for Tel-Catch instruction.

"It's fun," says a youngster named John. "I like to practice on the television because you're challenging your skills against the computer. It's the human against the computer."

A girl, working a multiplication problem on a TV screen, says the program helps her practice what she already has learned in class.

John Kreisha, assistant principal at Gateway, says the television program is fine for drill. "It is not a teaching tool per se. It is mainly forceful in reinforcing concepts."

Barbara Bonfiglio, a teacher at Gateway, says the computer can often strike a rapport with a youngster that a human can't. "They would rather have a machine tell them what is right or wrong than for me to tell them."

The Tel-Catch project was launched in 1974 when the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare allotted $900,000 to start the project and run it for two years.

The program was managed by the state education department's Office for Education of Children with Handicapping Conditions. Amherst was chosen as the site for the project because it had a well developed cable television service.

After two years, HEW withdrew from the program, and the state took over the financing. For the 1976-77 fiscal year, the state budgeted $109,000 for the program.

Since 1976, the United Cerebral Palsy Association of Western New York has been managing the project.

The only equipment needed is a television set, cable TV service and a telephone. Tel-Catch provides a keyboard and a coupling device to link it with the telephone.

International Cable, which provides the cable TV service in Amherst, has made seven of its unused channels available for the program. A channel can be used by only one child at a time, but the service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. So, if a youngster wants to get up at 6 a.m. and do some lessons, he can.

The lessons, developed by Hewlett Packard and the Palo Alto, Calif., school district, are stored in computers in a school in suburban Kenmore. In addition to providing questions and answers for various grade levels and subjects, the computers keep a record of each child's work. The records show what material the child works with, for how long and how well he did with the questions.

Tel-Catch hopes it soon will be able to expand to include Buffalo and eventually some other suburban communities.

LESSONS WITH MR. COMPUTER

A group of students at Gateway, a home for emotionally disturbed youngsters in the Buffalo, N.Y., suburb of Amherst, does a class assignment on the TV instruction system, Tel-Catch. Their teacher, Agnes Roussos, is at right. Tel-Catch provides two-way communication with students and individual instruction, via cable TV. The students call the system Mr. Computer: It speaks to them by their own names and plays games with them.

Claremont council to study issue

BY GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

About 150 Claremont residents, wary of a camper manufacturing firm moving to the city, are expected to attend the City Council meeting Tuesday night to continue to air concerns about Chinook International of La Verne.

A ruling by City Attorney William Bergman is expected to clear the air as far as an environmental impact report is concerned and to satisfy Claremont Business Park developer Charles H. Cooke who protested a Bergman ruling at a council session last Tuesday evening.

The new Bergman ruling, though, is not expected to satisfy the residents who do not want to see Chinook move into their neighborhood.

Visitors to Chinook's open-air plant at La Verne have reported problems of odor, the loudness of chisel-hammers, and even particulate emissions.

Cooke last year signed an agreement with the Claremont Redevelopment Agency (the City Council) that he would guarantee committing himself to starting a $1 million building in the park by Sept. 15 or he would pay whatever bills the city has obligated itself in putting in offsite improvements to benefit the 45-acre industrial park on the north side of Arrow Highway between Cambridge and Bucknell avenues.

Tied in with the construction of the $1 million building which must go hand-in-hand with the city's offsite improvements according to the owner-participation agreement signed by Cooke is a federal Economic Development Administration grant of up to $241,000, half the cost of the offsite improvements.

The city formally accepted the EDA grant offer July 14, must complete construction plans by Aug. 1 for the improvements, and call for bids by Aug. 15, a tight schedule for city officials.

Deputy City Manager Paul Brotzman said he has asked the federal government for a 45-day extension for the grant.

About 150 angry Claremont residents attended the council meeting last Tuesday night to protest the Chinook move when Mayor Bertye Smith declared that Bergman had ruled that discussion concerning the proposed Chinook "factory" would not be a proper subject for discussion at the meeting.

"The property is owned for industrial usage and is designated on the General Plan as industrial," Bergman explained. He said that unless the city wanted to change the zone or the general plan, discussion would not be in order.

He then turned to the matter of an environmental impact report which he noted had been prepared for the total proposed industrial park, but not for Chinook.

Bergman said that such an EIR should relate specifically to the environmental concern created by that particular industry.

The council set Sept. 6 for a public hearing on an EIR for Chinook.

Although the public discussion was staved off by Bergman, under oral communications Cooke grimly told the council that because of its action and Bergman's ruling he would not be able to meet his financial obligation by the Aug. 20 date to which the council had agreed at its July 12 session.

Cooke told the council that he wants to put up a speculation building which would not require an EIR. He said that the EIR on any use in a building Cooke might erect should be handled by that particular firm.

In his ruling which the council will consider Tuesday night, Bergman said that in response to the proposal by Cooke that he construct a speculative building rather than a building specifically for Chinook, he checked the EIR approved by the city Environmental Quality Board May 9, 1975.

Bergman said that the speculative building does cover a general industrial development, and that if the Architectural Commission approved it as to design, a building permit could be issued for a "general, speculative type of building."

Citing state guidelines as of Jan. 1, Bergman said that where a large capital project will require many discretionary approvals, and one approval will occur more than two years before construction starts, a staged EIR may be prepared covering the entire project.

Bergman said that the Cooke EIR was a staged EIR for the total development and covered such items as layout, environmental concerns of the total area.

"It, of course," Bergman said, "does not cover anything specific such as Chinook because at that time (1975) no one was aware of any specific development for the park."

"With a staged EIR, a speculation building could be constructed, and in order for it to be a specific use such as Chinook, a supplement to the EIR must be prepared to take into consideration specific impacts of such a use," Bergman ruled.

Tax break sought by seniors' complex

Officials of the Greater Pomona Housing Development Corp., backers of a planned senior citizen's housing complex, will ask the Pomona City Council Monday night to exempt the development from a $21,000 bed tax.

The bed tax is normally levied on all new housing to help the city pay for recreational facilities the new residents will use.

Developers of the 165-unit complex contend, however, that the complex will have its own $100,000 recreational and social center that will serve the entire area.

The $4.1 million project, approved by the city's voters two years ago, is to be built on the old Emerson School property. It is being financed through the state with the backing of the Pomona Valley Council of Churches.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting will include remarks from a representative of the Pomona City Employes Association, which is still embroiled in a wage dispute with the city.

Water source

The greatest single source of water that is stored in ice is the Antarctic ice cap, which covers about 6 million square miles. If the ice cap melted at an even rate, it would yield approximately 6.5 million cubic miles of water — an amount that would supply the Mississippi River for over 50,000 years.

Also, portable classrooms are being moved to Sultana and Cypress to handle the influx.

When he took job, little did he know . . .

Sirica's clerk was on inside of an American legal 'epic'

EDITOR'S NOTE: When he took the job, little did he know that his apprenticeship could put him on the inside of one of the most interesting legal epics in American history, or that he would be privy to the innermost thoughts of one of America's most famous judges. Meet D. Todd Christofferson, law clerk to Judge John J. Sirica during Watergate, a young man who says that for once he was in the right place at the right time.

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — To hear Judge John J. Sirica tell it, he owes his Watergate successes to his law clerk.

"He was the only one I could talk to," the judge said recently. "Without his help and advice and patience and everything else, it would have been pretty difficult for me in making those awesome decisions."

This father-confessor to Sirica was a blond 27-year-old of easy manner named D. Todd Christofferson. His signature appears on none of the uncounted legal papers that make up the judicial history of Watergate in U.S. District Court where much of the drama was played.

As Sirica's law clerk, Christofferson made no news. But he was Robin to Sirica's Batman.

More than five years after the event, Watergate renown clings to Sirica, eclipsing all else in a long career. Christofferson, in the meantime, has moved on: From law clerk to lawyer with a big Washington firm; from one-time missionary in his church to bishop.

"It was a great benefit to me. I was on the inside looking out," Christofferson says of his 28-month apprenticeship.

"I remember the judge saying at one time, while we were in the middle of all this, "I hope you appreciated what a great experience this is; not many law clerks get an experience like this." And then he paused, reflected for a moment, and said 'I guess not many judges do either'."

They shared, during more than two years of close collaboration, the anxieties and pressures of defining the law when the defendant is the President of the United States. And the toughest decisions involved the Nixon tapes.

Sirica has said that some nights he would go home "really down in the dumps and very sad."

One of those times was after Sirica and Christofferson listened to the "cancer on the presidency" tape of March 21, 1973. They were the first outsiders to hear John Dean lay out the Watergate coverup for Nixon.

"I was pulling for Nixon," Christofferson says. "I had voted for him twice. I didn't want to see him as the guilty party in this thing. I'm not sure precisely what the judge's feelings were. With his Republican background he was probably hoping, also, that Nixon was not a party.

"And yet, after hearing that tape we were kind of dumbfounded disappointed, shattered. For me, at least, it was all downhill from that point. And we kind of stared at each other ... didn't feel like saying much ... went home early ... didn't feel like working or talking. That was a very sad experience."

Christofferson was still in his last year at Duke University — Richard M. Nixon's old law school — when he applied to Sirica for the clerkship. He went to work on Sept. 1, 1972. Two weeks later the seven Watergate burglers were indicted.

"This is the one time I was in the right place at the right time," he says. "Who could have asked for better experience? Fresh out of law school, three years in academia, going into almost 2½ years of very practical and interesting work.

"We did talk a lot. A lot of mornings he'd come in, drive his old '60s Lincoln Continental into the garage and go into the cafeteria in the basement. He'd call and say come down and we'd take a little table in the corner and I'd have my milk and he'd have his coffee and he'd say, 'Well it's got to be private here.'"

Christofferson not only was the judge's sounding board but his spokesman at a time when reporters camped in the hallway outside Sirica's second floor chambers. Sirica's relations with the press were always friendly, but he worried about being accused of grandstanding.

"He didn't want to look like he was hustling the press, trying to ingratiate himself by leaking. When the tapes matter came along, there were people predicting that as soon as they got into the judge's hands they would be on the airwaves.

"I think he and I started out as real babes in the woods as far as the press was concerned and learned a lot very quickly.

"Judges generally object to any kind of contact that a law clerk has with the press. I've had a lot of former law clerks come up and say 'Hey, how come the judge didn't throw you out when you were talking with those reporters,' and I said he told me to. He said, 'Look, you deal with them. That's your job.'"

Christofferson did his job so well that Sirica twice asked, and got, his Army duty deferred. His one-year apprenticeship stretched to two years and started toward a third. Immediately after the Watergate cover-up trial ended on New Year's Day 1975, Christofferson put on a lieutenant's uniform and served three months at Ft. Benjamin Harrison in Indiana. After 28 months of Watergate, he says, "It was almost like a vacation."

The judge's toughest decision, Christofferson says, was his ruling of Aug. 29, 1973 that Nixon had to turn over nine White House tapes for Sirica's inspection. Christofferson said Sirica was a little disappointed that Nixon didn't appeal that decision to the Supreme Court because "he felt it was sufficiently significant that they ought to be the ones to pronounce final judgment in the matter."

Eventually, the high court got (and upheld) a Sirica decision forcing Nixon to give up 64 tapes for use as evidence at the cover-up trial. One of those tapes showed Nixon's early complicity in the cover-up, forced his admission that he had lied, and led to his resignation.

Before finishing college, Christofferson had worked as a missionary in Argentina for the Church of Jesus Christ and Latter Day Saints (Mormon). He is now a bishop, with his own congregation.

The obscenities on the Nixon tapes didn't bother him, he says, because "you don't go through life without running into that sort of thing very frequently."

But he was surprised because "I never heard Nixon use profanity in public — before Watergate, anyway — and yet it seemed to come very natural in private. I couldn't figure out, still can't, how he was able to do that. He was really leading a double life in that sense."

From listening to the tapes, Christofferson says, "I got the general impression that he was never really in control of Watergate. I don't mean that his acts weren't intentional or that he wasn't playing a role in the cover-up, simply that he was not on top of it. He wasn't running a tight ship."

Christofferson is in a 45-lawyer firm with mostly corporate clients. He still gets together with Sirica for an occasional lunch, and he's helped interview prospective law clerks for the judge.

His office wall has only one memento of his 28 months in the crucible, a photograph of Sirica, inscribed:

"To my valued friend and trusted colleague, Todd Christofferson, who is destined to be a great lawyer."

Mary Martin cast in a cast

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Her leg cast clearly visible, actress Mary Martin danced the Charleston and shimmied just as the script called for in her first appearance in a play in eight years.

Miss Martin, the Peter Pan who flew across television screens two decades ago, opened with Anthony Quayle Thursday night in the play "Do You Turn Somersaults?" — two nights after she tore a ligament in rehearsal.

There was no effort to hide the 63-year-old performer's ankle-to-thigh cast as she scooted across the multi-level stage. But she was unable to perform the called-for backwards somersault.

"I've been doing somersaults and back flips for two and a half weeks and didn't hurt anything," she said. "Then I bang my toe on just one little step and tear the ligament. I feel like Bloody Mary in the show 'South Pacific'."

Miss Martin's appearance in the Russian comedy at the University of Tennessee's Clarence Brown Theater is the first play she has done since she left the stage in 1969 after a two-year tour with "I Do, I Do."

Directed by Edwin Sherin, "Do You Turn Somersaults?" runs for 11 performances in Knoxville before beginning a six-week engagement Aug. 18 at the Kennedy Center in Washington.

The play was written by Aleksei Arbuzov and is about a physician who falls in love with a patient and former circus star "not quite 60."

It has played in Europe and England under the title "Old World." With Arbuzov's permission, Quayle and Miss Martin adopted the more upbeat "Do You Turn Somersaults?" from one of its lines.

In addition to her TV and stage performances of "Peter Pan," in which she also broke an arm, Miss Martin is best known for her roles in "South Pacific," "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Sound of Music," for which she received a Tony Award in 1959.

When "I Do, I Do" closed, Miss Martin and her husband, Richard Halliday, retreated to their ranch in Brazil. He died in 1973 and she moved to Palm Springs.

A friend sent her a review of the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of "Old World" starring Quayle, and Miss Martin went to London in February to see it.

Roger Stevens, chairman of the Kennedy Center, bought the play and offered her the lead.

ROCKING ALONG — The rock group, Renaissance, will perform at the New Greek Theater in Los Angeles at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday. Also on the card will be jazz/rock violinist Jean-Luc Ponty.

Spanish dancers at Bowl

Juan Talavera and his Spanish dance company of Santa Barbara will perform in the Redlands Bowl at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Admission is free.

The Talavera company has been the only Spanish dance company to appear at the Old Spanish Days Fiesta in Santa Barbara for 10 consecutive years.

Forming his own Spanish dance company a decade ago, Talavera has led it in hotel and club appearances, on concert and university stages and in numerous film and television appearances featuring Spanish dancers.

Principal dancers are Susana de Alcala, Oscar Nieto and Angelita. Company members are Yolanda Oropeza, Anna Maria Suarez, Ambar Rojo, Debora Tapia and Paco Vera.

A character performance will be done by Rick Davis, who is well known as a character dancer in all the Southland's leading ballet companies.

Senate committee investigates

Radiation peril from CB?

By INK DIPPER

Will CB radios go the way of artificial sweetener? We hope not, but there are some bad vibes coming out of Washington linking CBing to radiation health hazards. A U.S. Senate committee is going to be checking into the possiblity that some CB radios, linear amps and a proposed new citizens band may expose you to a dangerous amount of radiation emissions.

The flap over CB-related radiation is similar to the stir caused when it was announced several years ago that some color television sets might put out enough radiation to cause cancer, blindness or sterility in people sitting close to them.

According to a recent study done by Paul Reggera of BRH Electronics Products Division, a typical hand-held CB could be hazardous to your health. If the unit is operated at 2.5 watts with a full legal output of 4 watts at a distance of 5 centimeters from the antenna to the operator's eye then it could be going over the exposure standard set by the Federal Occupational Safety & Health Administration. Depending on the distance involved, the unit could be emitting 100 milliwatts as opposed to OSHA's standard of 10 milliwatts.

What all this means is that your walkie talkie could be exposing you to a dangerous amount of radiation if it's held too close to your eyes while in use.

But that's not the only need for the investigation. Remember the guy down the street with the illegal linear amplifier who gets out better than anyone in the neighborhood? Well, he may be getting out all right, but if alleged radiation problems are proven, he may just be helping send himself to an early grave. More power could mean more harmful radiation.

The FCC has been spending much time and effort on finding a new place on the radio spectrum for CBers to do their talking. The suggestion has been to move from the 27 MHz presently used for CBers, to 220 MHz or 900 MHz. But now even that move is being seriously questioned by decision makers at the commission.

"We certainly would be remiss if we were to ignore this (health and radiation) aspect of the proposed expansion. We just aren't experts in this area," said Carlos Roberts of the FCC Office of Plans & Policy.

Uncle Charlie and the Senate Commerce Committee have decided to take a full-fledged look at the situation. The committee is taking a comprehensive overview hearing this summer which will examine the entire range of health and safety effects of radiation. The study will cover not only CBers, but microwave ovens, RF sources and even X-ray devices.

Most soap operas no laughing matter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's a safe bet there's little that hasn't been anguish fodder for network soap operas — rape, drug use, adultery, out-of-wedlock birthings and other grimly treated ruinations.

So we asked Ann Marcus if humor may be the last barrier there.

"I don't know," said the lady, a cocreator of Norman Lear's non-network "Mary Hartman" and "All That Glitters," and recently named head writer of NBC's "Days of Our Lives."

"It might be too difficult to do a regular daytime show, trying to hold that large an audience — which is mostly made up of women — with humor," she added, noting that such is very hard to sustain.

Oddly enough, Mrs. Marcus, one of TV's busiest wordsmiths, broke into tube work in 1961 with humor, writing first for a situation comedy called "The Hathaways," then for other sitcoms.

She labored in the mid-1960s on the evening version of "Peyton Place," but didn't join soap operadom's daytime derby until 1969, when she became head writer on CBS' "Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing," she says.

Then came 1½ years on CBS' "Search for Tomorrow," which she says she left after Lear, with no network hot for his spaced-out "Hartman" series, decided to syndicate it to stations.

She stayed with it one season, then moved to his "Glitters," a satirical daily series that reverses the usual male-female roles and may end Friday unless Lear renews it by then.

Mrs. M. says she wrote the first two "Glitters" but left after she and Lear bitterly argued about the way the series should go.

She said she thought the Lear approach was too heavy-handed, dwelt too much on boudoir browsing and reflected stereotypes, albeit reversed, of the 1950s, not the '70s.

She spoke favorably, however, of what she calls "the first glorious year" of "Hartman" and its deadpan, often black humor in a soap opera setting.

She was asked what kind of mental shift was needed to go from that epic in weird to the much more sedate "Days" of NBC.

"Well, 'Hartman' was much more a group effort," she said, adding that she and cocreators Gregory Daniel Browne and Jerry Adelman took turns outlining each week's shows in the series' first season.

"And Norman was very much in evidence. It was free, such fun. The whole idea was, 'Open your head, open you mind, be as outrageous as you can.'"

Whereas on a network show such as "Days," she says, "I'm my own censor. And I know I can't get outrageous and crazy."

Mrs. Marcus, who hails from Little Falls, N.Y., and is married to writer Ellis Marcus, was asked if she thinks there'll ever be a daytime soap with as much humor as gloom in the diet.

"Yes, I definitely think there will be," she said. And she laughed. "And I probably will create it."

Looking for position? Try personal interview

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — Well, Harriet, here you are. The mother of grown children, sitting in a personnel director's office for the first time in years; maybe the first time ever.

And while you try to turn a suddenly twitching lip into a chic tic, the director says:

How much money do you want? Tell me about yourself? Etc.

"Ah . . . well . . . I don't really know . . ."

No, Harriet. Not like that. Do it the way William J. Morin says you should — if you want the job. Morin is Group Vice-President for Outplacement Counseling with Drake-Beam Associates, Inc., a New York firm that advises corporations on their "people problems."

First, he says, make sure you're visible. "Most office walls are light, so wear dark clothes so you don't blend into the background. Also dark colors are powerful — they cause people to listen to you, whereas bright colors tend to distract them."

Of course, bright colors, jeans, Peruvian hats are fine if they reflect the personality of the company, and that's for you to know beforehand. Otherwise, goodbye Harriet. "The personnel director's job is to measure your personality against the company's," Morin says, "and to screen you out if you don't fit."

So he eyes you and smiles and says, tell me about yourself?

"You've got to keep your answer to a minute and hit the highlights," Morin says. "Divide your life into parts: early life — I was born in Kankakee, Ill., in 1939, etc.; formal education — I got my degree in whatever at the University of Iowa; work experience — then I spent four very outstanding years as a legal secretary or whatever, and did I have a good time with that, sir. In fact — and it's very important for her to make a bridge now to the present — that's why I'm here today, sir, to talk about this opportunity to return to the field . . .

"You've got to cover all the bases because most interviewers want to feel you're normal, whatever that is. So I suggest volunteering marital status, children — it's all right to be divorced — so he won't think you're trying to hide anything."

But don't volunteer too much. "Don't ever raise a red flag in front of him, such as, my last boss was always after me sexually so I left. He'll be suspicious of you and a female interviewer will think you should have handled the situation."

You're doing fine so far, Harriet. Now don't tense up when he says, what kind of money do you want? "You should say, what's the salary range in this job, and then hit the midpoint. If there is no range, you must have a figure ready based on what you need to live on and what that job pays in your area."

All the while, Harriet, you're being positive, assertive — asking questions when convenient. "You can't take over the interview," Morin says, "but most interviewers look for some degree of aggression. It indicates a high energy level, commitment to the job, etc."

And you worked up a resume with panache, although all you had to write about was volunteer work at the hospital. "Never ignore volunteer work," Morin says, "just write about it creatively, in business terms. You didn't just help out with the candy stripers, you 'supervised, managed, budgeted' them. If you've done nothing, be honest. They'll find it refreshing. But never lie because they'll find out now or later and you'll jeopardize your career."

Congratulations, Harriet, you've made it past personnel. On to the boss who, Morin says, doesn't really know what to ask you except the same old questions. The thing here is to emphasize how smoothly you'd work along with him, how well you understand him and to do that, you've got to know what "time" he is.

"There are either now people, past people, future people, or those who function in all three time frames," Morin says.

"The now person, we call a 'senser.' He's decisive, time oriented, may not shake your hand, and when he says tell me about yourself, you do it in under a minute. He'll have a messy desk, no pictures on the walls because he's not a nester.

"The 'feeler' is past oriented. Sensitive, not too analytical, he'll offer you a cup of coffee. There's lots of memorabilia around, but his desk is neat. With him, you talk in terms of people, how important they are and how well you're able to motivate and get along with them. Use the words, 'I feel' a lot.

"Then there's the intuiter," the future person. He's creative, reflective, a pipe smoker who uses the pipe so he won't have to answer too quickly. Maybe he's in research or long range planning, so there'll be stacks of journals on his desk. Talk in terms of goals with him. 'I like to come up with ideas to improve paper flow . . .'

"Finally, there's the 'thinker,' a financially oriented person, who uses past data to analyze the present to predict the future. There's a calculator on his desk, charts on the walls. He asks factual questions, may seem cold, so be organized and have some facts and figures on hand about the company. You say, 'I see you have 53 employes here, sir . . .'"

There you are, Harriet. Enough, we hope, to get you into the job and then it's up to you.

One more thing. Maybe that personnel director asked an illegal, sexist questions such as who'll watch your children, and you smiled and said, rest assured everything will be taken care of. That was terrific, Morin says. "The objective always is to get the job.

"Then," he adds, "you get into a position of power and fire that personnel director."

Valley fathers awarded prizes

Ten fathers from throughout Southern California and Arizona, including two from the valley have benefitted from their children's creative efforts in the "My Dad's the Greatest . . ." contest sponsored by the Broadway department stores for Father's Day.

The contest was divided into 10 categories and one winner from each was selected. More than 5,000 entries were received.

Prizes ranged from weekend trips, a television set, a sailboat to sports equipment.

Girls who entered the contest from this area and were able to present prizes to their fathers were Carolyn Christian of Claremont, and Deborah Johnson of San Dimas.

Men, women react

What should you expect from males and females? Let's see how much you know about male and female reactions.

1. You ask a question at a party or at your office. No one really knows the answer but one individual pretends to know all about it. That person is most likely a Female ( ) Male ( )

2. You ask a friend how he or she feels. If that person has great difficulty putting feelings into words, he or she is more apt to be a Female ( ) Male ( )

3. There is a minor crisis and one individual goes to pieces and loses control. The chances are that person is a Female ( ) Male ( )

4. There is a major crisis involving a man and a woman. The person most likely to remain calm and survive the crisis is a Female ( ) Male ( )

5. In a broken love affair the person most likely to go to pieces is a Female ( ) Male ( )

6. Someone tells a bad joke at a party. Those who laugh longest and hardest are apt to be Female ( ) Male ( )

7. You need someone to make a quick assessment of another person. Your best bet is to select a Female ( ) Male ( )

8. You know someone in his or her middle years who has chosen to stay single and appears to be very happy and well adjusted. That person would most likely be Female ( ) Male ( )

ANSWERS:

1. MALE. Men are much more likely to try to bluff it out or "tough" it out than women. Women tend to be more conservative than men when they feel unsure of their judgment, but when a woman is sure she backs her judgment more fearlessly than a man.

2. MALE. Psychological and sociological studies reveal that men do not have as acute an awareness of their own thoughts and feelings as women have. This may be because men have had to repress their true feelings for so many generations. Studies also seem to indicate that women are generally more articulate than men.

3. FEMALE. Studies indicate that women tend to worry more about little things and they are more easily irritated by little things then men. If the crisis is minor, the female is more likely to lose her cool.

4. FEMALE. If the crisis is of major proportions, the female is more likely to endure than the male. Studies of hundreds of men and women reveal that women, while more easily irritated by little things, are better able to remain calm in a major crises than the average man. Women seem better able to handle severe emotional and psychological stress.

5. MALE. Judging from suicide rates and criminal files, men are more affected by disappointment in love than women. They are much more apt to kill for love than women and are much more apt to fly into jealous rages.

6. MALE. Psychologists at Wesleyan University and at Smith College investigated male and female college students to try to find out something about their attitudes toward humor. They found women were consistently more discriminating. They were unamused by poor jokes but found the really funny jokes funnier than their male counterparts.

7. FEMALE. Studies at Duke University and at the University of London uniformly agree that women are far better judges of character than men. Again, this may be because they often have had to rely on quick judgments in the past while men could fall back on their physical powers to protect them in case they made an error.

8. FEMALE. A recent psychological survey conducted on the west coast showed that single women were better adjusted, less frustrated and more active in working out their personal problems than single men. Other studies have suggested that men are less self-sufficient when it comes to living alone.

If you answered six out of eight questions correctly, you are better informed than most people on the subject of gender.

Short survey: Cal Poly students split over pot issue

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

Should federal criminal penalties be eliminated for persons caught with small amounts of marijuana?

President Jimmy Carter believes they should. He recently asked Congress to substitute civil fines for criminal penalties.

But Cal Poly students appeared split on the issue during a recent, informal survey taken on campus.

Some believe marijuana is harmful and should continue to be illegal. But others said marijuana is not much different than alcohol and should be treated as such.

Of the 14 students interviewed, they were split 7-7 on the matter. Their comments indicated that many students had experimented at least once with marijuana.

Carter move prompts views on both sides

Jim Janosik, 20, a junior majoring in park administration, said it was difficult for him to accept President Carter's statement that marijuana should be decriminalized.

"He claims to be a 'born again' Christian, but it seems hypocritical that he could favor allowing people to abuse their bodies and escape from reality through drugs. I really question why he's doing it."

Steven Miller, 28, an electronical engineering student, believes marijuana should be legalized. "There is an awful lot of money being spent to enforce marijuana laws that could be put to better use elsewhere.

"People should have the freedom to choose whether they want to use it or not. Present laws which make it illegal are the source of a lot of discontent between some parents and their children."

Dave Leistikow, 21, an ornamental horticulture student, said the use of marijuana is wrong. "Penalties should remain for drug use. President Carter is going against what is right, and I would seriously disagree with his position."

But Louis Parga, 20, a political science major, disagreed. "Since it is a victimless crime, there shouldn't be any penalty."

He said marijuana does not lead to hard drug use, it is not physically harmful or dangerous, and is not a problem in itself. "Make the penalty for driving under the influence of marijuana very strict to discourage persons from possibly endangering others. But other than that, I

IT'S JUST FOR LUCK

This Pennsylvania Dutch hex sign, purchased locally, adorns the home of the Ralph Cole family at 847 N. Gordon St., Pomona. They like the way it looks, they say, and it's a good conversation piece. The neighbors ask about it. The family is not Pennsylvania Dutch.

Profile: E.C. Harrison

He's a renegade, a liberal

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

He's a renegade, a liberal in the true sense of the word.

The first president he ever voted for was Norman M. Thomas, who in 1928 headed the Socialist Party in America.

He's held more jobs in his almost 76 years than you can count on both hands and the biggest mistake he ever made, he said, was to retire.

As a skilled machinest, he helped design parts for the infamous U2 plane, which they called a powered glider, working for Lockheed Aircraft Co. in Burbank.

Up close, E. C. Harrison of 313 E. McKinley Ave., Pomona, is surprisingly frail, until he speaks.

"I'm self educated," he admits. Shortly after being graduated from Chino High School in 1921, he read American novelist Jack London's autobiography "Martin Eden." Ever since, he has read, researched, traveled and learned.

Harrison cares little for the establishment or the approval of others. His opinions are expressed freely. During the years he has lived in Pomona he possibly has attended more City Council and school board meetings than any of those elected to serve.

E. C. HARRISON, a true liberal

His critical and often caustic remarks at public meetings over the years caused some in the community to view him as a "pesty gadfly." Such criticisms did not deter Harrison.

Bilingual education in the Pomona schools has been the target of some of his displeasure.

"The way they teach bilingual education in Pomona is a stupid waste of money," he charges. "It is not true bilingual education. Not like they teach in the European countries. Over there, they teach English as a second language, in the true sense."

The schools here, he said, "are teaching kids as fast as they can about socialism. The bad thing about it is they are leaving off the ISM."

Economically, the country is in trouble, he recognizes.

"Eventually they (governmental leaders) will repudiate the national debt. They could pay it if they'd issue interestfree notes like Mr. Lincoln did to pay for the Civil War."

What upsets Harrison the most today is "the apathy of the American people. It is terrible. But, I do have this hope for the people, that when the chips are down they will come to the fore. We just will not be slaves," he said.

He says he has learned that life is a case of "dog-eat-dog, and you'd better keep your teeth sharp."

Harrison was born Aug. 26, 1901 in Warren, Ill. He said he "started running away when he was 3, always headed West" and by 1906 had his folks in North Dakota. They were in Chino the year he was a high school senior.

His father, also E. C. Harrison, operated a food cannery and a shoe shop. Young Harrison tooled parts for his father's leather sewing machine, became interested and enrolled in a machinists class at Chaffey College in Ontario. And that was his formal training.

But, he worked as a parts designer for both Lockheed and North American companies, retiring in 1964. Earlier in his life he had worked at the Big Bear boat landing, as a hotel dishwasher, a service station operator, behind a soda fountain, as a tractor operator, in a glass plant, and in his father's cannery and shoe shop.

With clarity, Harrison remembers each job, how he got it, with whom he spoke and what they said.

He loves history.

He says the three greatest things he has learned are the importance of research, the relevance of cause and effect and the fact that necessity is the mother of invention.

Harrison is married to a retired school teacher, Harriet.

In space

So how could people live up there . . . ?

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

How about it, is there life in space?

Six children interviewed at Pomona Public Library children's room believe not.

And, without exception they knew why.

"It's simple," said one boy. "There is no oxygen and no water, so how could people live up there?"

Life in space had been discussed at schools they attend, as had the space exploration program. Two of the children thought money spent on space exploration was not wasted. Others weren't sure.

"All they found was rocks," said one.

JAY MICHAEL GONZALEZ, 13, Pomona, said "I read books and I go to school. You can't breathe without oxygen. Earth is the only planet with oxygen as far as I know."

MICHAEL O'BRIEN, 9, Pomona, said "I think it's impossible that people could live out there in space on other planets." He is interested in space, and the money spent on exploration is worthwhile, he said. "Maybe they will find oxygen, but I doubt it."

JUDY MARTINEZ, 10, Pomona, a fourth grader at Madison Elementary School, had a straight, no-nonsense answer. "No. There are no people living in space." She said she likes to read and goes to the library every day to read "good stories."

JOE GUITERREZ, 9, Pomona, agreed with Judy. "No, there are no people in space. I never heard of them," he said. Joe attends Madison Elementary School and likes arithmetic and social science.

STACIE LOPEZ, 9, Pomona, a fifth grader at St. Madeleine's School, was direct in her answer. "No. There is no oxygen out in space."

PAULA WELLMAKER, 11, Pomona, said "No, no one really went there. They don't know for sure. Just going to the moon, that is not far enough." Paula completed sixth grade at Kellogg Elementary School and will be going into seventh grade this fall.

Opinions expressed by the children were given in serious tones and soft voices, as befits a library. No child heard what any of the others had said.

Knocking on wood

It can be 'good' or bad; luck is important to many

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

It's one of the most important things in our lives, at least so we say.

It can be good. It can be bad.

What is it?

Luck.

We give it credit for our successes, and we blame it for our defeats.

You can get it from the stars, horse shoes, rabbits feet, four-leaf clovers, or like the Irish, be born with it.

And you can lose it thanks to ladders, black cats and broken mirrors.

You can keep it with salt over the shoulder and a knock on wood.

Most of us want all we can get of it (the good variety that is), but don't go out of our way to seek it.

So it was somewhat surprising to see in Pomona a sight usually seen 3,000 miles from here: a Pennsylvania Dutch hex sign.

The signs are supposed to bring good fortune, depending upon the design, for such things as fertility, love, rain, abundance, long life, romance, joy, and protection against spells or curses.

The Pennsylvania Dutch hex signs, like almost any superstition, have believers who swear by them. In certain sections of Pennsylvania they are a common sight on barns and in homes.

They come in a variety of designs and colors, all having individual meanings.

It is said some Pennsylvania Dutch farmers have separate signs over the stalls of each of their cows to increase milk production.

So what does the Ralph Cole family, who put one of the signs on their residence at 847 N. Gordon St., have to say about it?

"It looks nice. The neighbors ask about it," said Cole simply.

"It's supposed to bring good luck," advised his son, Mark.

The family is not Pennsylvania Dutch.

If nothing else, it brought fortune to someone — Griswold's in Claremont.

"That's where we bought it," said Cole.

Measuring Mondale

Those stories about the man who became vice president of the United States and never was heard from again do not apply, obviously, to the current vice president, Walter F. Mondale.

Mondale — if his first six months in office are any indication — is likely to go down in history as the most visible and possibly the most influential vice president we've ever had.

As presidential candidates often do, Jimmy Carter promised during the 1976 campaign that Mondale would not be shoved in a corner after the election. In this case, at least, the promise appears to be coming true.

The two men seem to be so temperamentally compatible, so at ease with each other, that they're able to function far better as a team than, say Jack Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson or Lyndon Johnson and Hubert Humphrey.

This is not to say that Carter and Mondale agree on everything. Mondale was not unhappy when Carter canceled the $50 tax rebate. Nor does he share Carter's views on cutting off federal funds for abortion.

Yet the liberal ex-senator from Minnesota and the relatively conservative ex-governor from Georgia complement each other in ways that two similar politicians would not. Mondale. for example, knows more about Congress than Carter. He also has some useful ideas about taking the drudgery out of presidential campaigns — one of which, a proposal to set up a system of six regional primaries around the country, should be enacted into law before the 1980 election.

Traditionally, vice presidents have been the wallflowers of American politics. How many schoolboys can tell you about Daniel D. Tompkins, or Hannibal Hamlin, or Levi P. Morton, or Charles G. Danes?

It is well to recall, however, that four of the last eight vice presidents have become president, three of them under trying or chaotic circumstances when a president died, was assassinated or resigned.

That should be reason enough to make sure that Mondale — or any other vice president — is ready and able to step into a president's shoes if the need should ever arise.

Many mini Olympics?

The people who put on the Olympic Games have come up with an intriguing idea! Why not split the games among several nearby cities instead of wishing the entire burden on a single city every four years?

Lord Killanin of Ireland, who presides over the International Olympic Committee, says the regional approach might be tried as early as 1984. Several cities in Sweden may bid jointly for the 1984 winter games. And there is talk that perhaps Los Angeles could share some events with Long Beach and other neighboring towns if it were awarded the 1984 summer games.

Security would be more difficult if the games were split. Transportation and press coverage could be more complicated.

But the games have become almost too expensive for any one community. And the less familiar sports — like shooting, archery and canoeing — tend to be overlooked when all the action is in one place.

With proper planning, the regional approach could be a way of making the games less hectic and more fun for the athletes.

Our goal must be not peace in our time, but peace for all time. — Harry S. Truman.

Just in jest

Some things never change — especially if those things are politicians who are making loud noises to prove they are worthy of their hire. As it was in the beginning it is now and ever shall be. However, let's give credit where credit is due. Today's self-styled statesmen are really not quite as adept at that sort of flimflamming as were the political masterminds who were living off the taxpayers 85 years ago. The records prove it.

In 1892 a senator from Oregon introduced a bill that, if enacted, would have made it a crime to hypnotize or mesmerize human beings.

That was also the year an assemblyman from Pasadena introduced a bill that would give city councils the power to compel the planting and maintenance of shade trees upon public streets at the expense of property owners.

And just to show you that our politicians have always been ready to step in where angels fear to tread, perhaps the most momentous question in which our lawmakers were concerning themselves in that long, long ago was a debate going on in Congress as to whether or not the World's Fair in Chicago should be allowed to open on Sundays.

Neutron bomb: Fiction vs. facts

WASHINGTON — The people-poisoning neutron bomb has become the summer's most emotional issue, yet it may not be quite the ogre its critics claim.

It is a nasty weapon, to be sure, whose victims will suffer violent nausea, diarrhea and other unpleasant symptoms before they die. But many misconceptions have been spread about the bomb.

From White House, Pentagon and congressional sources, we have obtained information that may help to set the record straight:

—The neutron bomb has been portrayed as a weapon that kills people and spares buildings. It has become a symbol, therefore, of an inhuman military policy that sacrifices people in order to take over their property intact. In fact, the bomb is a defensive weapon, which might help stop a Soviet invasion of Western Europe with reduced damage to the besieged cities.

—By reducing the blast, heat and fallout, the neutron bomb can be used with more precision against the attackers. The objective is to destroy the advancing forces, without devastating allied property. An offensive would have the opposite objective. The aim would be to destroy hostile territory, particularly military facilities, transportation lines and supply centers, so the enemy couldn't use them. The neutron bomb, therefore, would make a poor offensive weapon.

—Critics are fearful that field commanders would be tempted to use the bomb as a conventional weapon because of its low yield. In fact, the bomb will become part of the nuclear arsenal, which is under the direct control of the president. The arsenal already contains nuclear shells and warheads of lower yield. The neutron bomb, despite its reduced blast, would destroy a few square miles of property. "It's a big bomb not to be used casually," emphasized a White House adviser.

—Pentagon strategists warn that the allies would lose a conventional war with the Soviet Union on the European mainland. In case of a Soviet attack, therefore, the United States must either strike back with nuclear weapons or abandon Europe. It's just possible, the neutron bomb could stop an invasion without a nuclear Armaggedon. "This will give the president an option that won't devastate Europe," explained one of his advisers. "And the Russians will have to consider that option before they attack." Rep. M. Robert Carr, D-Mich., a staunch congressional opponent of the arms race, agrees that the neutron bomb "will decrease the probability of war and increase the probability of containing nuclear war should it occur."

—The impression is widespread that neutron bombs will be added to the nuclear stockpile. Actually, they will replace existing nuclear weapons. Rep. Carr in an unpublished study also suggests: "The neutron bomb should enable us to reduce our total number of tactical weapons in Europe — perhaps retiring three older weapons for each neutron bomb deployed."

Sources close to President Carter contend that he shouldn't be held to the letter of his campaign statements about nuclear weapons. "A seasoned president appreciates the subtleties of his responsibilities more than a candidate can," said one associate. "While he's still a very idealistic man, his first duty is to make sure the country can defend itself."

Carr says he will support the development of the neutron bomb. But he warns forcefully: "If I see evidence that the relevant decision-makers show any signs of regarding the neutron bomb as a tool to make nuclear war a routine operation, I shall be compelled to oppose its deployment."

He concludes: "Probably the most serious danger in the neutron bomb is the fact that, while in itself it doesn't make a great deal of difference one way or the other, it has distracted public attention from more significant national defense issues."

Freedom from influence

and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Common Cause this month will celebrate its seventh anniversary — an appropriate occasion to recount a series of previously unpublicized events which preceded its founding in 1970 and deeply influenced the organization ever since that time.

Throughout the 1970s, Common Cause has had a profound influence — probably more than any other single institution — in bringing about significant change in the way the people's business is conducted in Washington.

The key to the organization's success has been its independence from the countless interest groups — notably big business, big labor and the major foundations — whose ubiquitous if not insidious influence affects all of our daily lives.

The central figure in Common Cause's relationship with those interest groups was John W. Gardner, the organization's founder and its chairman until his retirement earlier this year.

In mid-1968, Gardner became chairman of the National Urban Coalition, formed during the previous summer as a direct result of the racial violence spawned in many of the nation's major cities. That group's "governing board" was composed of the familiar "distinguished" leaders from business, labor, government and civic groups.

The Urban Coalition's avowed purpose was to forestall future rioting. As a result, it was, in the words of one observer, "born with a silver spoon in its mouth" because of the generosity of those who feared they and their institutions would be the victims of further looting and burning.

Tax-deductible contributions came pouring in from the Rockefeller, Sloan and Kellogg foundations; from the AFL-CIO and many of its constituent unions; from the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., American Can Co. and Bethlehem Steel Co.

The National Urban Coalition was a "safe" and non-controversial organization, operating with a vague mandate. But the same couldn't be said for its companion group, the Urban Coalition Action Council, independently chartered to lobby for specific reforms.

Because contributions to the Action Council weren't the lobbying group received far less financial support from wealthy institutions.

The Action Council campaigned against the anti-ballistic missile, arguing that the billions of dollars earmarked for that weapons system should instead be spent on domestic needs. That incurred the wrath of both hawkish AFL-CIO President George Meany and Chase Manhattan Bank Chairman David Rockefeller, whose family had contributed tens of thousands of dollars to the Action Council.

The AFL-CIO finally cut off all financial support to the Action Council after it announced support for the "Philadelphia Plan" requiring labor unions to open apprenticeship training programs to sizeable numbers of blacks and members of other minority groups.

Supporters from the business community became similarly alienated when the Action Council lobbied against Sénate confirmation of then-President Nixon's nomination of G. Harrold Carswell to a seat on the Supreme Court and pressed hard for an end to the war in Vietnam.

Gardner never publicly discussed those defections, but as the plans for Common Cause took shape, the Action Council experience demonstrated to him that a "boat-rocking" organization could not count on support or leadership from those whose first priority was the maintenance of their own power and influence.

On the other hand, the National Urban Coalition was well-funded but ineffectual. The lesson was clear: If Common Cause was to be properly financed but free to speak out on controversial issues, it could rely for support only on a broad base of individual citizens — and that's exactly what it has been doing, with considerable success, for seven years.

Our Man in Washington

Filibuster not a bad device

By TERRY WADE
PB Washington Writer

WASHINGTON — As this column is being written, the U. S. Senate is locked in a typical battle of wills.

Similar battles have been fought in the hallowed halls of Congress many times before and always with the same rhetoric and threats of recrimination.

The filibuster has become a senatorial tradition replete with the mystic and false beliefs of all other traditions.

Most Americans, no doubt, think of a filibuster with the memory of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" prodding their minds.

They see Jimmy Stewart, as Mr. Smith, standing for hour upon hour battling with words the corruption and guile of his Senate colleagues.

Most Americans have the wrong idea. Although there is a good deal of talking during filibusters, the chamber is usually empty save for the speakers and one or two diehards.

And the filibusterer no longer goes on and on without respite.

A filibuster can be turned on and off, with the agreement of all, and the Senate goes on with other business.

The filibuster is greatly despised by the filibustees as you can well imagine. As is the case with the current filibuster the filibustees could easily pass the campaign financing measure but for the Republicans and a few conservative Democrats.

As it was once explained, "a filibuster is a good thing because it gives everyone an opportunity to completely think over what they are doing before they run roughshod over a minority."

The conclusion of that explanation also holds some solace for the current filibustees. As the senator who explained it pointed out, "the civil rights measures of the 60s were almost all filibustered the first or even second time around, but they all ended up passing in a better form than they were originally."

Financing campaigns for the United States Senate may or may not be a good idea. The present legislation could be good or bad, but the filibuster can do it no harm.

It now looks like there will be no public financing of campaigns for the 1978 elections because of the filibuster, but if the idea is worth its salt it will surface again.

And, the chances are it can do nothing but grow better with age.

Ann Landers

How U.S. looks to a foreigner

Dear Ann Landers: May I tell you how your country looks to the eyes of a foreigner? One hears a great deal about the energy crises in the United States. Well, I am not surprised.

There is no place in all the world where laziness and creature-comforts are so expensively encouraged. For example: You people can't cut a roast without an electric knife. You can't wash a few dishes without an electric dishwasher. You must use a blender to whip cream, mix a cake or prepare an omelet. You buy frozen foods which must be kept in a freezer because you are too busy (lazy) to go to the market and purchase fresh food, which is much cheaper, more healthful, and tastes better.

I have never seen so many gadgets in all my life! And everything is run by electric current. I rarely see clothes hanging on lines in your backyards. Women use electric washer-dryers and then they must add something store-bought to make the clothes smell fresh.

Nobody walks anywhere or uses a bicycle which would be marvelous exercise. In fact, bicyclists are looked upon as "obstructionists" by drivers of your gas-guzzlers.

The wastefulness I have seen in the U.S. is a scandal. The meals served in restaurants are double what they should be. The food thrown out by families (leftovers) is a disgrace. Almost everyone is overweight and trying to diet. It doesn't add up.

If your President Carter thinks he can convert the American people to a lifestyle of austerity and sacrifice — good luck to him.

So it's back to good old England for me — and I'll bet you don't have the guts to publish this. — Lassie From Lancashire

Dear Lassie: During World War II we Americans tightened up our belts, took our fat cans to the butcher (if you'll pardon the expression), accepted shortages and rationing without complaint and we survived just fine, thank you. We are a great nation — capable of making any sacrifice necessary to meet this country's needs. But first we must BELIEVE there is a crisis, and that's the problem.

I have tremendous admiration for the English and their indomitable spirit. But the aspect of our own government which worries me the most is in the areas where it seems to be imitating yours. Bon voyage, Lassie.

Dear Ann Landers: May I comment on the letter from the man who signed his letter, "Planning On Sex Until Ninety?"

I wonder what his wife is planning. Suicide, probably. I know because I am married to the same kind of sex maniac. We are in our early 60s and I have had enough sex to last me for the rest of my life — even if I live to be 100. Oh. I pretend a lot and never say no. My old goat would just love any excuse to look elsewhere, but I'm not going to give it to him.

Never thought I'd live to see the day when I was in favor of premarital sex, but I am. People should learn before marriage what the other's sexual appetite is like. Bet you don't have the nerve to print this. — Tired

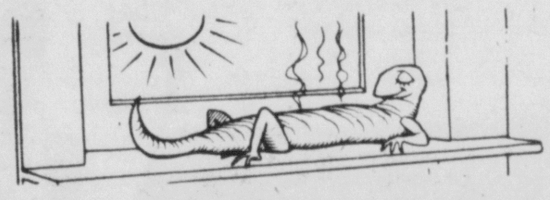
Dear Tired: You and the lassie in the first letter both lose. Thanks for telling it like it is at YOUR house.

Marmaduke

"Did you tell Snyder that Marmaduke is afraid of vacuum cleaners?"

Dr. Miller

Lizards drink a little differently



DEAR DR. MILLER: A friend says not to bother giving my chameleons (they're anolis lizards) water, because they don't need it, because, unlike humans, their bodies contain little water. Tilly and Gus do look pretty dried out, but I thought they needed water anyway. No? — R.O.

DEAR R.O.: Actually, proportionately, an anolis contains about ten per cent more water in his body than does a human. It's possible, though, that Tilly and Gus contain less. Even with your watery offerings, they may be dehydrated because they prefer not to drink from a bowl but rather, to lap up water in droplet form from leaves.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We just picked up an endearing two-year-old, spayed miniature poodle. She has this cute trick of begging by walking on her hind legs, and believe me, she's good at it. What I'm writing about is her one quirk — she has noisy knees. When she walks, or sometimes when she's just getting up, her knees have these incredible sounds — popping and snapping mostly. Well, the noise doesn't bother her, she's probably used to it. Should we just get used to it, too, or is there something we should do for them? I don't suppose there's any way we could oil them? — A.T.

DEAR A.T.: Unfortunately, oiling isn't the answer. Surgery is one alternative a veterinarian might present to you. There may be other alternatives than that, depending on the condition of those knee joints and the stability (or, more likely, the lack of it) of the knee caps.

Chances are, it's the knee caps popping in and out of position that's making most of the knee noise. Regardless of the approach, there's one recommendation you can count on: Discourage excessive hind leg stresses and strains. That means minimize stair-climbing, jumping, and that trick so many poodles perform proficiently, which is so hard on trick knees, walking on the hind legs.

EMERGENCY?

Should a sudden emergency arise with your pet, be it poisoned, struck by a car, suffer sunstroke, or whatever, rush it in to the hospital, of course, but CALL (or have someone else call) FIRST. Tell the doctor the nature of the suspected emergency and the estimated time of arrival. That way the hospital may be able to save precious moments in getting prepared to give immediate help, shortcutting time-consuming front office communication.

Erma Bombeck

They only want to be alone

Ever since our children went into their "locked door" syndrome, our house has all the charm of a mental institution.

The entire house used to be open range. Anyone could graze anywhere and still be in plain sight. Not anymore.

The other night I knocked loudly on the bedroom door.

"Who is it?" asked a voice.

"It's Mama."

"Who?"

"MAMA!"

"Are you sure?"

"Yes."

"What do you want?"

"Open the door. I want to talk to you."

"Did 'he' send you to get his records back?"

"No. Unlock this door."

The door opened a crack and one eye peeked out. "Oh, it's you."

"You were expecting Donnie Osmond? Come to dinner." The door slammed shut.

Following a telephone wire, I traced the next child to a locked closet.

"I know you are in there. The telephone wire is warm. Come to dinner."

There was silence. Then a whispered voice said, "She's listening. I'll call you back."

The next one was a toughie. I found him behind a locked door in the garage playing his drums.

"Do you hear me?" I shouted. "It's dinner."

"Who told you I was here?"

"The neighbors."

"Is that all you want?"

At dinner I asked them, "Why do you feel you have to lock yourselves in your rooms? Surely, we can respect one another's privacy without bolts and chains. Getting this group to the dinner table is like cracking the First National Bank of Manhattan."

"Look, Mom," they explained patiently, "we are going through a phase of our lives when we need privacy. We have to have time to find ourselves — to find out who we are, what we are, and where we are going. Surely you can understand that."

Later that evening, I locked myself in the bathroom when a note slid under the door. It read, "I need a quarter. Where is your purse?"

I wrote back, "I am finding myself. If I don't know who I am, it's a lead pipe cinch I don't know where my purse is."

Dr. Lamb

Blood pressure keeps rising

DEAR DR. LAMB — My blood pressure used to run about 190 over 80 or 162 over 90. Now when the nurse takes it she gets a reading of 198 over 100.

Are you familiar with studies by Arthur Master and Harry Jaffe of 74,000 men and women in industry? They found that blood pressure increases with age. Most younger doctors I have seen don't seem to know this. My doctor said to just watch my lower (diastolic) reading and if it was below 100 I would avoid a stroke or other problems and not to worry about the top (sstolic) reading.

When my sister-in-law, who was a nurse, takes my pressure it is 184 over 86 or 176 over 82.

Anyway I have learned to live with the problem. I'm 77 and that is nine years better than the average age for men in this country. Before I retired I weighed 180 and now 150.

DEAR READER — Yes, I am familiar with the studies you mention and many others that show blood pressure increases with age. That doesn't mean it is desirable. A fourth of people die of heart attacks so they are pretty common but most of us would like to avoid that common problem. People who continue to have blood pressures on the low side, even in later years, are best protected against heart attacks and strokes.

It used to be taught that only the diastolic pressure was important but we know better than that now. The Framingham studies over a 25 year period showed that elevation of the systolic (top) reading of blood pressure was just as important as elevation of the low reading in terms of strokes and heart attacks.

It is common for the pressure to increase with age because the aorta, the large artery carrying blood away from the heart, tends to lose its elasticity. The more rigid aorta can't expand when blood is pumped into it with each beat and this causes the pressure to be greater. I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure, to give youa better understanding of the factors that affect blood pressure. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Some people have higher readings during stress, including medical examinations than at other times. I'm not surprised that you get lower readings at home. It is possible that your pressure is consistently lower in the home environment. Losing that weight was the right thing to do.

Pressure in the range you describe is usually best treated conservatively with weight loss, avoiding coffee, and stress and maintaining a suitable exercise program. For you a daily walk would probably be just fine.

To help you improve the outlook for your lifespan you should stay on a moderately low fat, low cholesterol diet and not smoke. That is the lifestyle our early presidents had. And while you are feeling good about your lifespan let me remind you that the presidents from Adams to Van Buren had an average lifespan of 81 years, a bit better than today's national average for men. But cigarettes, automobiles, television and refrigerators to store rich food had not yet been invented.

Your Birthday, August 8, 1977

It's probable you'll become involved in many more outside interests this coming year. That's all well and good, but bear in mind: You must keep your expenses in line.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) View with a critical eye any moneysaving tips passed on to you by pals today. Recall: The lowest price is not always the best buy. Find out more of what lies ahead for you by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An intimate is jealous of your status and accomplishments. If you do something unthinkingly in her presence today, expect repercussions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Deceit is not your bag, most particularly not today. You'll probably be caught if you attempt to tell even a little white lie.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Shun commercial involvement today with persons or firms you have good reason to be suspicious of. Somebody could try to tap your wallet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you're easy to get along with. Today you make it tough on people because you say one thing and really mean another.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you're eager to go out of your way to help those you feel are less fortunate. Be careful a conniving individual doesn't try to use you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A person you meet socially may impress you today. Before you share any confidences, be sure to check out his credentials.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's of prime importance today to set the proper example for those under your wing. If they see you getting away with something, they'll try it later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Think twice before passing on second-hand information today. It may not be true; even worse, it may injure another's feelings or reputation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Small details are important in business or financial transactions today. To overlook them could cause confusion and consternation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to be more decisive today. It's better to do something at the risk of making a mistake than to attempt nothing and accomplish the same.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your efforts to help another are marvelous today. You could negate the whole thing by telling others and damaging the image of the person you assisted.

We are indebted to Chester Billings writing in the American Bridge Teachers' quarterly for today's hand which illustrates the defect of making an extra bid merely because it is your turn.

Fearless Phil sat West. The bidding is that shown in the box. South proceeded to make four clubs by the expedient of winning the spade, drawing trumps, cashing his second high spade, ruffing a spade, coming to his hand with a third trump, ruffing his last spade and getting out with a heart.

East won and led a diamond. South ducked. Now the defense could take a second heart, but had to either lead a diamond away from the king or give South a ruff and discard.

Fearless Phil complained that his partner had failed to show his heart suit. Four hearts makes and while North and South could have taken a mere one trick set at five clubs they might well have let East play there.

Billings blamed Fearless Phil — not his partner and we agree. When Phil bid three diamonds, he was just making a silly bid. Had he not done so East would probably have shown his hearts. The diamond rebid scared him and he passed fearing a bad misfit.

Ask the Jacobys

A Connecticut reader wants to know what South should bid with:

♠ K Q 10 8 7 ♥ K 7 6 ♦ A 8 3 ♣ J 6.

He has opened one spade and his partner has responded one notrump.

South should pass. He has a minimum opening bid with notrump distribution. There is no good reason to bid two spades.

Suspicions hurt marriage pairs

You've known the woman who makes a fetish of seeing to it that no man ever puts anything over on her. And you've seen the man who devotes much care to making sure that no woman ever takes him for a ride. These two fairly common characteristics do just about as much to delay and damage matrimony as any. References to them are in our Love and War man's war, not Love, file.

Time for decision: hobby or interest?

By LOU COTTIN
NEA Columnist

A hobby is an escape, an interest is an involvement.

A hobby is a private and personal pastime. An interest presupposes work or struggle toward a goal.

A hobby just passes time. An interest uses time.

We are not playing word games here. A person newly come from the working world enters the world of hobbies with a sense of dismay. It's a serious problem. So long as directors of senior activities overemphasize "hobbies" we are in trouble. The possibility of taking a responsible place as contributors to society is lost to us. We can be overlooked, disregarded. We are classed with children. We are treated as nonentities.

More important, we need to discuss the hobbies situation with our middle-aged sons and daughters. They are now working, bringing up our grandchildren. They participate in the work of the world. They are something. We are nothing. How will they fare when their turn comes to spend their lives puttering about aimlessly?

Study of the matter can lead to one conclusion only: The hobbies must be turned into interests. A conscious effort must be made to re-educate us as retired Americans. We must search out our qualities, must make our abilities accessible.

Self-respect demands that we make something out of our hobbies. The center director offers brushes, a palette, a place to work and a modicum of advice. Note that the word is "work," not "shmeer." You may discover after working on a canvas or several canvasses that "shmeering" is all you can do. Painting is not your "thing." You aren't moved to start visiting art galleries. You don't have sweet dreams of exhibiting a finished piece which delights others.

What the heck. Go to some other hobby. Keep trying to find your own medium. Think what you can do in service to others. Try birdwatching, writing, handicrafts, with serious efforts to excel. Do something which will stamp you as a competent producer in the field of your choice.

Hobbies which merely use up time diminish you. Hobbies which become serious interests establish your status. They reassert your right to a place of distinction in society.

The image we seniors present to the world is important. People ask a child: "What do you want to be when you grow up?" When they speak to an elderly person they ask: "What do you expect to do when you retire?" The implication, the assumption, is that we retirees can't possibly be anything once we've stopped working for wages.

There is a hidden nobility within all of us. It was there through all our many years of toil. We bore the stresses forced upon us by the need to make a living. But somewhere, some time in our lives, a spark of godliness lighted up our hearts. Now, in retirement we can, at last, dig into our past and rekindle the dreams so long denied.

In his book "A God Within," Rene Dubos, the eminent bacteriologist and Pulitzer Prize-winning author, speaks of a fundamental pattern of life that survives as long as the whole survives. He quotes from a sonnet by Michelangelo:

The best of artists has that thought alone which is contained within the marble shell,
The sculptor's hand can only break the spell.

To free the figures slumbering in the stone. Let people ask us, "What do you want to be when you retire?" Let us answer them courageously. "We will be artists. We will be politicians. We will join in the struggle to assure a richer life for those in need. We will contribute as we can and work to perfect our qualities as useful members of society."

Early this month a play by 80-year-old Harry Granick was presented by the PAF Playhouse in Huntington, N.Y. The title was "The Bright and Golden Sand."

The play tells the story of the Granick family's early and continued experiences in the United States. Quoting the thoughtful review by Allan Wallach, "The greatest triumph in the play is experienced by the aging Baba Liza." As Granick tells it in the play, Liza dug back into her youthful experience as a "painter on velvet," to become an established artist at age 84.

The directors of centers for the aging may or may not be able to inspire us. What they offer through the hobby activities they make available is the opportunity to find ourselves, to measure our talents.

It may seem like a small thing to make a pretty pair of booties for a grandchild. It may pass the time pleasantly to work with others on a patchwork quilt.

But with such productive activities there is always a next step. We must accustom ourselves to asking, "Where can we go from here?"

Don't wait for others to inquire, "What do you want to be when you retire?" You ask them.

Sizemore beats ex-mates again

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Where is Quency Hill today?

Hill is the player the Dodgers got from the Phillies along with catcher Johnny Oates in exchange for second baseman Ted Sizemore.

Oates has done a creditable job (.291 in 39 games with eight runs-batted-in).

On the other hand, Sizemore is killing the Dodgers.

The dimunitive infielder (a small 5-10, 165) singled in the winning run with two out in the ninth inning Saturday night as the Phils edged the Dodgers, 1-0, for their second win in a row over the Angelenos. 50,111 were in attendance despite a thunder storm that delayed the start of the game 13 minutes.

Friday night Sizemore singled in the lead run in the eighth inning as the Philadelphians went on to crush the Dodgers, 8-3.

"I've been hitting the ball pretty good the last couple of weeks," Sizemore said. "He (Dodger pitcher Burt Hooton) had gotten me on balls outside that I hit pretty good. So I was looking for a pitch that was in."

Greg Luzinski opened the Philly ninth with the Phils' fifth hit off Hooton, a single to left. Jerry Martin ran for Luzinski and got a stolen base when rookie Kevin Pasley had a strikeout pitch on Richie Hebner bounce out in front of him.

Garry Maddox, who had two singles and two stolen bases already, was intentionally walked. Bob Boone flied out to right and Martin took third after the catch.

Tommy Lasorda went out to talk with Hooton. But whatever he said, was to no avail.

Sizemore grounded Hooton's first offering into leftfield for the game-winner.

Hooton (9-6) deserved a better fate. He allowed six hits, struck out six and walked three, two of them intentional.

"Hooton's got good stuff," said Sizemore. "That knuckle-curve is tough. He has a good fastball. He throws strikes and he throws hard the whole game.

"I was just looking for a pitch in my zone, one that I could handle. I got it, and I swung. It could have gone right at the guy (third baseman Ron Cey), but it went by him."

Sizemore, batting eighth in the powerful Phil lineup, is hitting .268 and has batted in 34 runs and scored 38. He replaced Dave Cash, who went through the re-entry draft last year and now is with Montreal.

Was it tough replacing a player of Cash's stature?

"When the Dodgers traded me the first time (to St. Louis), I replaced Dick Allen," Sizemore grinned. "So I had some pretty big shoes to fill then."

Didn't it feel especially good to beat the team, the Dodgers, that traded him?

"Maybe it would have in '71," he smiled. "I used to really get jacked up when we played the Dodgers. But now it's the same as any other team we face. It's good beating a contender, one we might face in the playoffs.

"I thought I'd be in L.A. for a long time. I love to play there. But the trades have been good. I have a very high regard for the Dodger organization. It's like a second home to me."

The win went to Gene Garber (6-5) for the second night in a row. Garber replaced Jim Kaat who hurled seven scoreless innings before being taken out for a pinch-hitter.

Garber allowed only a leadoff single to Hooton in the Dodger eighth. The Dodgers failed to score.

Dave Lopes sacrificed, but Bill Russell forced Hooton at third and Reggie Smith flied out.

Kaat and Garber ended modest hitting streaks for Russell and Steve Garvey. Russell was stopped at nine games and Garvey at seven. But it took two good catches by Jay Johnstone and Maddox to end Garvey's string.

Johnstone stabbed a Garvey drive with a leap against the rightfield wall in the second inning and Maddox caught one on the warning track in centerfield in the sixth.

The Dodgers now are down to .500 (4-4) on this road trip. They must win today to win the season series with the Phils against whom they are 6-5.

The loss dropped the Angelenos to 17-21 in one-run decisions.

Sudden thought. It's probably just as well the game didn't go into extra innings. The Dodgers have lost six of the last seven extra-inning affairs.

Halo home runs sink Baltimore

ANAHEIM (AP) — Bobby Bonds, Don Baylor and Ron Jackson slammed home runs to account for six runs and Ken Brett won his fourth consecutive game as the California Angels took a 9-5 decision over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday night.

Bonds' solo homer in the first inning was his fourth in four games.

Baylor hit a three-run homer in the third inning, his sixth in 12 games. Jackson's blast in the fifth inning accounted for two more runs off loser Rudy May, 12-10.

Brett improved his record to 10-8, but needed relief help from Dyar Miller in the eighth inning after giving up a grand slam homer to Ken Singleton.

Jackson paced the 13-hit California attack with three hits, scoring twice and driving in a pair of runs.

California took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Bonds' home run.

Lee May led off the Baltimore second with a single. Eddie Murray singled, May taking third. Doug DeCinces grounded into a double play, May coming home to tie the score at 1-1.

With one away in the California third, Jerry Remy singled, and May hit Bonds with a pitch. Baylor homered over the left field wall to give the Angels a 4-1 lead.

It was Baylor's 16th homer of the season, one more than his 1976 total.

May was knocked in the fifth when California stretched its lead to 6-1. Gil Flores singled and scored on Jackson's fourth homer of the season.

Brett had dropped his first four decisons after being acquired from the Chicago White Sox on June 15.

ANGEL ANGLES — The weekend series as well as the homestand ends today when Paul Hartzell takes the mound for California against Baltimore's Jim Palmer (12-9).

The Angels go on the road, stopping first at Kansas City, where they will engage the Royals in a twi-night doubleheader Monday night.

Centerfielder Thad Bosley has been reinstated and taken off the 21-day disabled list. However, the Angels immediately replaced him on the injured list with ailing righthander Gary Nolan.

Bobby Bonds has recorded 20 RBI in his last 17 games, during which he has also belted seven homeruns. The centerfielder has homered in each of his last four games to bring his season total to 25. He has also driven in seven runs in the same four contests.

Blocked punt foils L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cornerback Nate Allen blocked a Los Angeles punt, scooped it up and ran 23 yards with 1:27 remaining to give the Minnesota Vikings a 22-17 victory over the Rams Saturday night in the National Football League pre-season opener for boths teams.

Punter Gerald Vaught was given a low pass from center and barely got hold of the ball before Allen closed in and blocked the attempted kick.

Minutes before Allen scored the game-winner it appeared the Rams' come-from-behind effort would pull the game out. The crowd gave Joe Namath a thunderous welcome in his debut with the Rams.

But it was rookie quarterback Vince Ferragamo from Nebraska who guided Los Angeles 74 yards in 15 plays and sent Rod Phillips busting through the right side for two yards and a touchdown.

Ian Sunter booted the extra point to put the Rams ahead 17-16 with 5:05 to play in the game.

Namath played only in the third quarter. He was greeted by a standing ovation and the crowd went wild when he completed his first passing attempt. It was good for 11 yards to Terry Nelson and on his second he connected for 11 more with Jim Jodat.

Namath finished with three completions in four tries for 34 yards and was sacked once for a loss of nine yards.

A crowd of 55,168 was on hand at the L.A. Memorial Coliseum in the 32nd annual Los Angeles Times Charity Game.

Quarterback Fran Tarkenton, playing only in the first quarter, ushered Minnesota to a 16-0 lead.

Cuevas KO's Gray

LOS ANGELES (AP) — World Boxing Association welterweight champion Jose Pipino Cuevas made short work of challenger Clyde Gray Saturday night, rocking the Canadian in the first round then finishing him off with powerful combinations midway through the second round.

Cuevas, the division's youngest champion ever at 19, was the aggressor from the beginning, and looked as if he might knock Gray out in the opening round. The 30-year-old Gray fought back gamely, but the young champion's speed and power were more than the Canadian could deal with.

The knockout, which came at 1:26 of the second round, marks the third successful title defense for Cuevas, who took the title from Angel Espada last summer.

The triumph at the Olympic Auditorium was the 24th for the champion from Mexico City, who has lost five fights. The knockout was the 19th for Cuevas.

Gray, a 10-year ring veteran, now has a 56-6-1 record. This was his third and probably last shot at the welterweight title.

Gray, the British Commonwealth champion, had been whipped by Espada in his last title try.

Cuevas, a quiet, deeply-religious young man, became a relentless aggressor from the opening bell against Gray.

Softball finals set for tonight

Despite getting only one hit, Corona defeated Montclair, 9-4, Saturday to advance to tonight's championship contest with Walnut in the Senior Division of the Montclair Golden Girls Softball Tournament at Montclair's Kennedy Park.

Meanwhile, Upland downed Riverside Catholic, 5-3, to advance to the Major Division finals against Corona and Walnut earned the right to face Montclair for the Minor Division crown by beating Glendora, 10-3. All title games will be played tonight at 5 p.m. at Kennedy Park.

The best individual performance in Saturday's contests was turned in by Walnut's Stacy Warren, who helped her team avoid elimination by throwing a one-hitter at Glendora in addition to fanning six batters.

NFL roundup

Waters' heroics spark Dallas

By Associated Press

Dallas safety Charlie Waters blocked two San Diego punts and the alert Dallas Cowboys cashed both of them in for touchdowns Saturday night to destroy the dazed Chargers, 34-14, in a National Football League preseason game.

In other NFL action, Green Bay upset Cincinnati 23-20, Pittsburgh got by Buffalo 28-24, Detroit blanked Kansas City 17-0, New Orleans beat Chicago 20-14, New England downed the New York Giants 19-3, Atlanta squeaked by St. Louis 3-0, and Miami defeated Tampa Bay 13-7.

Chester Marcol kicked two 45-yard field goals in the last 1:14, including the game-winner with one second to play, rallying the Packers to their triumph.

Marcol's decisive kick came after the Pack got the ball back when defensive tackle Mike McCoy stripped the ball from rookie quarterback Tom Duniven at the Bengals' 38-yard line with 29 seconds remaining.

Terry Bradshaw fired three touchdown passes to lead the Steelers to their win. The QB's biggest toss of the game was a 62-yard scoring hookup with John Stallworth to pull the Steelers from behind a 17-14 margin and give them a lead which they never relinquished.

The Lions' defensive unit held the Chiefs for seven plays inside the five-yard line in the third quarter shortly after Dexter Bussey had run eight yards for the game's first touchdown in Detroit's opening victory.

Archie Manning, who sat out the entire 1976 campaign with injuries, fired a TD pass and along with Bobby Scott's scoring toss, offset a 92-yard kickoff return by Tommy Reamon to give the Saints their victory over the Bears.

Manning hit Tinker Owens with a 32-yard scoring pass and also utilized his arm to set up 41 and 23-yard field goals by Rich Szaro.

Veteran Nick Mike-Mayer booted a 37-yard field goal in the fourth period to give the Falcons their win. The kick climaxed a 47-yard Atlanta march.

Quarterback Bob Griese passed for a touchdown and rookie Mike Michel kicked two field goals to give the Dolphins their verdict over the Buccaneers.

Tampa Bay missed three field goals and a chance to break their 17-game losing streak dating back to the 1976 preseason.

Chino Nat'l bows in LL Sectional

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

SAN BERNARDINO — Frank Famalari hurled the Section 6 Tournament's only no-hitter this week as he was backed by an overpowering performance by his Covina-Northview teammates with the wood.

Covina-Northview scored seven times in the first two frames of Saturday night's championship game at the Western Regional Little League Headquarters diamond as they coasted to an 8-0 triumph over Chino National.

In two previous Section 6 games, Covina's pitching had given up eight runs even though the club had won both contests. The Covina manager knew what he was doing though as he apparently held back his best pitcher for the championship game. And he pitched a no-hitter!

Covina with its 8-0 victory over the Chino outfit will meet the Section 7 champion Monday night on the Regional field.

Famalari was backed by several outstanding fielding plays but he lost a chance for a perfect game with a second inning walk and two not so brilliant fielding plays (errors) by his infield.

Mark Alvo almost ruined the no-hit bid by Famalari in the third with a soft liner down the rightfield line. But Mike Asbury raced over to the line to make the catch. Todd Webster gave the Covina fans a mild heart attack in the sixth when he drilled a fastball down the third base line. But the ball landed in the third baseman's glove for an out instead of a base hit to the leftfielder.

Famalari had the National batters off-balance as he mixed up his pitches. However, he only recorded five strikeouts in the contest as the Chino batters made contact with his tosses. The Chino squad was popping the ball into the air. But only Alvo's drive reached an outfielder's glove for a putout.

Ronnie Barraza was 3-for-3 in the first three frames of the contest. His first hit started a four-run explosion and his second inning hit led to three runs.

Mike Beatty smashed a two-run single in the four-run first inning. Asbury just missed a homerun in the second as he singled off the rightfield fence. Troy Richards added a double after Asbury's blast.

Tour unknown nabs GHO lead

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Even though he shot a 64, set a seasonal record for 54 holes, was 17 under par for the tournament and held a two-stroke lead, Bill Kratzert still could find fault with his performance in Saturday's third round of the $210,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open Golf Tournament.

"I was a little too relaxed on those last two par fives," the tour sophomore said. "I just took it for granted I would birdie them."

He didn't.

But he dropped a dramatic, 50-foot birdie putt on the final hole—moments after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day — and stretched his lead to two shots over Lee Elder going into today's final round of the chase for a $42,000 first prize.

"It's kind of good to have them chasing me for a change," said Kratzert, who has yet to win an individual tour title in his brief career. "It seems like I'm always chasing the leaders. Now they can chase me."

Kratzert, wearing his trademark dark glasses despite the gray, gloomy skies that threatened thunderstorms, played his third consecutive round without a bogey and finished with a spectacular, seven-under-par 64 and set a couple of records.

His 54-hole total of 196 was the best this tournament has ever seen for three rounds and was four shots lower than the best previous 54-hole total posted on the tour this year.

Elder, playing in the same threesome with Kratzert, was only one stroke back of Kratzert when the national television cameras cut away, but failed to match Bill's heroics on the final hole and finished two behind at 198. He had a closing 67.

Curtis Strange, a 22-year-old rookie pro and a former national collegiate champion from Wake Forest, shot a 68 and was third at 199. Morris Hatalsky, with a 65, was at 200, equalling the best previous three-round total this year.

Bill Mallon, 66, and Rod Curl, 65, were at 201.

Second round leader Victor Regalado hit one out of bounds on the second hole and never recovered. He finished with a 72 and was tied at 202 with U. S. Open champ Hubert Green and Terry Diehl. Green matched Kratzert's 64 as the best round of the day and Diehl shot a 68 on the 6,598 yard Wethersfield Country Club course that, as usual, gave up some of the lowest scores of the tour year.

PGA champ Dave Stockton was 69-206, defending title-holder Rik Massengale 69-208 and Johnny Miller 70-209.

Kratzert, 25, who hooked up with Woody Blackburn to win the National Team championship as a rookie last season, has not made a bogey in the tournament, but had to hole a testing, six-foot par-saver on the 17th that kept him one shot in front of Elder.

"I knew I had the lead and I was just trying to make par on the last hole," he said.

But his 50-footer found the cup just as a drizzling rain began to fall and his lead went to two.

"Everthing just fell into place this week," said Kratzert, who has had rounds of 66, 66 and 64. "I'm not hitting the ball any better. I'm just making the putts."

In addition to the long one on the final hole——"it was a goodly distance," he said—he also scored from 15 feet on the fourth and 25 on the 12th.

His others came after crisp iron shots had put him close to the hole, four times leaving him putts of six feet or less.

Pomona driver wins hydro race

DAYTON, Ohio — Terry Turner of Pomona, driving "Uncle Norman Lauterbach," won the combination five litre and seven litre class of the inboard powerboat races Saturday at the Dayton Hydroglobe.

Turner turned in a top speed of 84.388 m.p.h.

Driver Durb King of Covington, Ky., was killed when his 225-cubic-inch boat flipped over when he was making a charge on the straightaway on the second lap when the accident occurred.

King, 51, was a veteran of 15 years of racing. A nursing supervisor at Miami Valley Hospital, where King was rushed after being thrown clear of his craft, attributed death to cardiac arrest.

It was the first death in 12 years of racing at the Hydroglobe.

Worn-out Solomon upset

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — Fifth-seeded Harold Solomon, worn out by his victory Friday over No.1 Jimmy Connors, was beaten 6-4, 6-1 Saturday by 12th-seeded Australian John Alexander in the semifinals of a $125,000 international tennis tournament.

Alexander advanced to today's final against fourth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain, who wore down tired Eddie Dibbs 6-3, 7-6 in the other semifinal.

Alexander served four aces in the match and generally was sharper than Solomon. He broke Solomon's service in the 10th game of the first set and from then on, he said, "it was easy."

Solomon said he was not sharp after the emotional, grueling 1-6, 6-4, 6-1 upset of Connors, "but that's no excuse. I had a lot of chances to win but I started serving badly for some reason and that was it."

Alexander did not play well against many of Solomon's cross-court angle shots but was able to get to the ball more often in the backcourt. The 6-foot-3 Australian, nine inches taller than Solomon, was also avble to reach many of Solomon's shots at net, a feat which had eluded Connors.

Sports briefs

Jackson pact denied

NEW YORK (AP) — Gabe Paul, president of the New York Yankees, emphatically denied Saturday that controversial slugger Reggie Jackson has an escape clause in his contract with the American League club.

Swedish yacht impressive

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Sverige, the computer-designed Swedish yacht, upset Gretel II after a spinnaker sail got away from the Australian crew, and the yacht Australia won her fourth and fifth consecutive races Saturday in the elimination series for America's Cup challengers.

Hutcherson bounces back

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Ron Hutcherson, whose Grand National car was declared illegal and withdrawn from Sunday's Talladega 500, drove a sister Chevrolet to a half-car length victory over Jim Sauter in Saturday's Automobile Racing Club of America 200-mile stock car race.

Vilas reaches quarters

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Guillermo Vilas continued his domination of the clay court circuit Saturday with a 6-3, 7-5 quarter-final victory over Jeff Borowiak of Palo Alto, Calif. in a $85,000 tennis open.

Rankin triumphs

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Judy Rankin streaked away in heavy rain Saturday to win the European Women's Open golf title by six strokes and top $100,000 dollars in prize money for the second straight year.

Carew spurns Sporting News

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota's Rod Carew said Saturday he doesn't care if he ever appears on the cover of baseball's leading weekly publication again.

"Hell with The Sporting News," said Carew following the Twins' 6-5 victory over Cleveland. "They want Larry Hisle and me to pose for a cover story and I think that either one of us are good enough on our own merits."

"Where were they (Sporting News) when I was hitting .500 during the month of June," said Carew, whose .383 batting average is the best in baseball. "I don't need them."

The Twins' first baseman was mad when teammate Butch Wynegar, who was then locked in a long slump, was the subject of a cover story in early July while Carew was hitting over .400.

Hisle, who continues to lead the American League with 87 runs batted in despite sitting out the last week with a sprained ankle, wasn't bothered by Carew's decision.

"People can do whatever they want to," said Hisle. "I've learned that it's part of life."

Hisle has never appeared on the cover of The Sporting News, a weekly tabloid devoted mostly to baseball coverage.

The 31-year-old Carew, whose 11-year major league career has been dotted with emotional outbursts, had earlier agreed to be on hand with Hisle at 10:30 Saturday morning to have the color picture taken for the publication.

When the photographer arrived, Carew said he had changed his mind.

"I have the right to change my mind," he explained later. "I don't have to explain my reasons to you guys. I don't tell you how to write your stories."

Koppel finds he can't quit, wins it all

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

Andy Koppel, 20, of Upland can play. There's no doubt about that now, but he battled for 10 months trying to break par to no avail. He thought about forgetting about golf for awhile, but decided to enter another Amateur Golf Association tournament last Monday before he tucked away his clubs.

Just hoping to break 77 — his scoring average for the last six rounds — Koppel fired a one-under par 71 on the hilly, well-bunkered Calabasas course to beat a field of 122 and win the Confidence Western Amateur event.

The one-stroke margin of victory for the Cal Poly Pomona sophomore tuned out to be a two-putt birdie on the 18th. It was his third birdie of the day against two bogeys.

"I honestly thought about quitting for the first time in my life," Koppel said to himself the day before the Calabasas tournament. "I've played 60 rounds since last September and never broken par."

The 6-3, 210-pounder was playing his third round in the Western Amateur. He previously had shot 82 at Cottonwood and a 76 at Rolling Hills.

Koppel proved he really can play. Congratulations.

Dinah Shore and McLean Stevenson will be teaming to act as honorary directors of the 1977 Southern California Professional Golfers Assoc. Hole-in-one contest.

The charity event is to be conducted at PGA clubs and courses from Aug. 27-Sept. 5, with finalists participating in pre-game playoffs at Dodger Stadium on Tuesday, Sept. 13 before the Dodger-Padre game. Format for the event is closest to the hole, with men, ladies and junior winners from each course.

Beth Daniel of Charleston, S.C., the champion of 1975 and low amateur in this year's Women's Open, will lead six former champs into the qualifying round of the 77th U.S. Women's Amateur championship at Cincinnati C.C. in Ohio.

A field of 52 players will begin competition Monday and the low 64 will begin match play on Tuesday.

Jerry West, the old Laker cager, is some golfer. He shot a 67 at Los Alamitos golf course last Saturday to win the Dick Whittinghill Invitational.

Tom Watson has but one objection to the prestigious World Series of Golf: the $100,000 that goes to the winner.

"It's a great tournament, a great, international field and a great format," said the man who has collected the Masters, British Open and four other international titles this year.

"I'm not completely in accord with the money breakdown, however," said Watson, who's gunning for leading money-winning honors this season.

"With $100,000 going to the winner, that man has a big jump on being the leading money-winner, just off the one tournament. I'm not sure that's the right thing. I'd like to see the purse spread out a little more."

The famed Pebble Beach Golf Links, site of the PGA, may be in less-than-superb condition this week.

Water rationing, brought about by the California drought, has limited watering to tees and greens for several weeks. One touring pro, a recent visitor to Pebble, said the course has suffered.

Lee Trevino is on a diet.

"One meal a day—breakfast," Trevino said. "The rest of the day it's just fruit and juice.

"I'm about 180 now. I'm trying to get down between 167 and 175. I think the loss would make me a better player."

Announcement of the 1978 tour schedule is being held up due to some maneuvering involving tournaments immediately following the U.S. Open.

There will be three weeks, and the tournament dates, between the American and British opens next year instead of the usual two.

More than 100 junior golfers will play Marshall Canyon Tuesday in a regularly sponsored tournament conducted by L.A. County. Bob Clare, Marshall Canyon pro, will direct the event.

One of the valley's top tournaments, the Diamond Bar Invitational for partners, will be held Sunday, Aug. 28 at Diamond Bar golf course. Winston Janes is director for the tournament.

I'm looking forward to seeing Pebble Beach again this week when the pros attack the seaside course in the PGA. They tell me Pebble isn't what it used to be; the fairways are brown in spots and the drives will get more roll than in previous tournaments.

But I'm certain the wind will be blowing, the fairway rough will be treacherous, and the greens for the most part will be the slickest this side of the Mississippi.

Without a doubt, Pebble Beach is the most challenging course I have ever seen. I have never played it, and frankly I don't have much desire to. I'd rather watch, thank you

Orr's future clouded

ATHERLY, Ont. (AP) — Bobby Orr hasn't done much other than play hockey in his lifetime, so he's looking ahead anxiously to his new off-ice duties.

The Chicago Black Hawks' defenseman underwent a sixth operation on his left knee two months ago and isn't anticipating a return to playing the game for at least a year. The big question is whether he'll ever play again.

"I hope so, but I'm just not sure," he admits. "I want to try one more time, but it won't be next season. The doctors told me to take a very long rest away from hockey to give the knee a chance to gain strength ... Beyond that, I just don't know. I want to try again, but there is the chance that I just won't be able to play hockey again."

After previous operations, he tried to come back too quickly, he acknowledges. "But this time I'll be patient. There'll be no rushing back. That's why I've written off the 1977-78 season."

His duties within the Black Hawks' organization haven't been defined. He knows he'll be working under new Coach Bob Pulford, who in faces an enormous task rejuvenating a mediocre team.

"I haven't done much in my 29 years except play hockey and it's time I learned a few other things," Orr says. "You can't call me an assistant coach, manager or anything. I'm going to work with Pully and do anything he wants me to. It will give me a chance to see the other side of the game—how things are done from management's end.

"Playing hockey has been my entire life and I have faced the possibility that it might be all over for me as a player. That's why I want to shift gears in my life a bit."

Banks to be enshrined in HOF

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Ernie Banks, known as "Mr. Cub," and five other former players will be enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame Monday.

Besides Banks—the only player chosen this year by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America—others being inducted into the Hall will be Al Lopez, Joe Sewell, Amos Rusie, Martin Dihigo and John Henry Lloyd.

Following the ceremonies, the Minnesota Twins and Philadelphia Phillies will play an exhibition game.

Lopez, Sewell and Rusie were selected by the Veteran's Committee while Dihigo and Lloyd are the eighth and ninth players to be picked by a special Committee on Negro Baseball Leagues.

Banks, who starred for 19 years with the Chicago Cubs, first at shortstop and then at first base, finished his career with 512 home runs and became only the eighth player to be chosen for the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility.

Known for his blithe spirit, Banks joined the Cubs in 1953 after playing for the Kansas City Monarchs of the Negro League. He led the National League in homers in 1958 with 47 and 1960 with 41.

Banks was named the NL's Most Valuable Player in 1958 and 1959, when he had 129 and 143 runs batted in, respectively, although the Cubs finished in a tie for fifth place both years.

Rusie and Sewell were named as players and Lopez in the non-active category that covers managers, umpires and executives.

Lopez spent 19 years in the majors as a catcher, his best full season being 1933 when he hit .301. He caught more games than any other catcher in major league history, 1,918. But as a manager with Cleveland and the Chicago White Sox, Lopez won two American League pennants and finished second 10 times in his 16 seasons.

On of three brothers to play in the majors, Joe Sewell played 11 seasons with the Cleveland Indians and three with the New York Yankees.

Called "The Hoosier Thunderbolt," Rusie, the strikeout king of the 1890's when he hurled for the New York Giants, posted a 36-13 record in 1894 with a 2.78 earned run average while pitching 50 complete games.

Dihigo, named to the Cuban Baseball Hall of Fame in 1954, was Cuba's Minister of Sports when he died in 1971. A star of the Negro, Cuban and Mexican leagues, Dihigo was outstanding as a hitter and pitcher.

don't see any reason for keeping it illegal."

Sharron Anderson, 20, a business major, doesn't believe President Carter should legalize it. "I don't think decriminalization will reduce illegal trafficking in drugs.

"Generally, the penalties have not been stiff enough. Teen-agers don't get punished enough for possession of marijuana. If a person is caught with it, he should have to pay the consequences."

Carl Schoener, 24, a behavioral science major, said marijuana should be decriminalized. "The inconsistencies in the law are causing numerous law enforcement problems and keeping tax money from being spent on more important purposes.

"Studies have shown that alcohol is more harmful and causes more misery than all other drugs combined. It seems unfair to those who might be arrested for small amounts of marijuana."

Lisa Tung, 20, a zoology major, and Becky Maag, 19, a physical education major, believe marijuana should not be decriminalized.

"I've never smoked it and never will, and so it really doesn't affect me. But I don't think it should be legalized," said Miss Tung.

"It might lead to hard drugs and other things," added Miss Maag.

Ken Weeks, 20, a political science major, strongly supported its legalization, including the selling and cultivation.

"I don't think President Carter's proposal goes far enough. Strengthen penalties for driving a car under the influence of marijuana or alcohol.

"But if people want to use it in the privacy of their own homes, let them do it," he stated.

Changes to greet La Verne students

La Verne College students will be greeted by a number of changes when they return to classes Sept. 12.

Perhaps the biggest change will be the academic calendar which will change to the "4-1-4 system" this fall. The new schedule will allow two four-month semesters and a January "interterm" period for concentrated study in a single subject area.

President Armen Sarafian said the college had previously been on a 3-1-3-1 system with shorter semesters and two interterm periods. The system was changed because some courses could not be taught in the short three-month semester. A faculty vote decided the change last spring.

LVC students will also find that the library has moved to a new building over the summer. Some 90,000 volumes of literature are now housed in aisles that once held canned goods on the old Alpha Beta market at the corner of Third and D streets in La Verne.

JOINS FLEET — The nuclear attack submarine USS Indianapolis floats free after she was launched during ceremonies recently in Groton, Conn. The submarine is the second U.S. Navy ship to bear the name Indianapolis. The first was a cruiser sunk during the final days of World War II in the Pacific. The sub was built by Quincy Shipbuilding Co. of Massachusetts, a division of General Dynamics Corporation, of which Pomona Division is a part.

Big boost in spending

U.S. arms makers still sitting pretty

Progress Bulletin
Finance
Pomona, California ■ Sunday, August 7, 1977

LOS ANGELES (LENS) — president Carter's curbs on arms exports have made the defense companies glum — right? Wrong. Arms makers in Southern California, a big segment of the military-industrial complex, claim the outlook for them both at home and overseas is better now than at any time since the Vietnam war.

Wall Street agrees. The shares of McDonnell Douglas, the top defense contractor, are trading near a five-year high. Those of Lockheed, number two, have recovered from a brink-of-bankruptcy level under $3 in 1973 to above $18. Brokers forecast a respectable increase in profits for nine aerospace companies, and a spectacular 60 per cent increase for Northrop.

The figuring is that Mr. Carter's controls on overseas sales of arms will not apply to America's major markets and that any losses on the foreign roundabouts will be more than made up by gains on the Pentagon swings.

At home, an increase in the federal defense budget from $103 billion in the fiscal year 1976 to around $120 billion in fiscal 1978 (which starts this October) tells only part of the story. More relevant is expenditure on hardware. For fiscal 1978 this will be around $32 billion — or half as much again as the $21.3 billion of two years earlier.

Although Congress is still fiddling, the industry believes 1978 cuts will be small. Doves in Congress, and in such liberal think tanks as the Brookings Institution, who used to campaign for more money to be diverted from military to social spending, have had their wings clipped by reports of boisterous Russian defense spending. The Central Intelligence Agency reckons defense spending is 11-13 per cent of Russia's gross national product — whereas it is 5.5 per cent of the United States's GNP. Congress is more than willing to underwrite the cruise missile (Boeing and General Dynamics joust for the contract) and the neutron bomb.

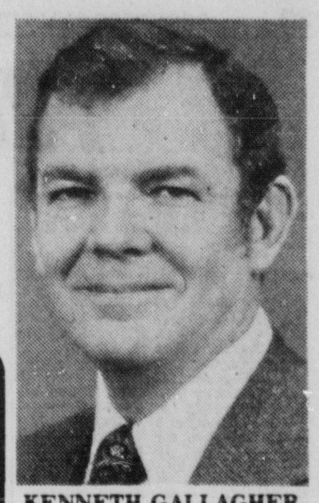
Congress is less happy about military sales abroad. Candidate Carter struck a responsive chord with his phrase that the United States must become the world's granary rather than its armorer. So did Walter Mondale: "America is no longer an arsenal of democracy — it is quite simply an arsenal."

Since jet fighters and attack aircraft have dominated America's foreign military sales, the Carter curbs ought to worry McDonnell Douglas (main contractor for the F-18 Hornet and the F-15 Eagle, Grumman (the F-14 Tomcat), Northrop (the F-5 Tiger II and the F-18L Cobra), and General Dynamics (the F-16).

They seem unworried. The backlog of foreign military orders for delivery by 1983 already totals $32 billion. And Mr. Carter exempts NATO members, Japan, Australia, New Zealand and, for most purposes, Israel from his controls. NATO is expected to become a larger market as its members replace aging Starfighters and other aircraft, and keep to their commitment to increase defense spending by at least 3 per cent in real terms in both 1979 and 1980.

Saudi Arabia and Iran are not exempted, and together they are expected to account for $4 billion of the $9 billion in arms the United States may this year sign contracts to provide. Recent hints that the White House will agree (Congress willing) to the sale to Saudi Arabia of nearly $1 billion-worth of F-15 Eagles seem to confirm the view that OPEC members will not be denied this potent means of reducing their oil surpluses. What the defense contractors say in private is that they will take the Middle East, Western Europe and Asia and give France and Britain back their — less creditworthy — traditional markets in Africa and South America.

The judgment may be too skeptical. Mr. Carter astounded nearly everyone in the defense industry, including the contractor, Rockwell International, when he scrapped the B-1 bomber, just as he promised he would during the election campaign. He probably also intends to try his best to slow the arms race in those countries that can afford costly weapons least.



KENNETH GALLAGHER

San Diman promoted

Kenneth Gallagher of San Dimas has been appointed assistant manager and assistant vice president for loans of Bank of America's West Glendale branch.

Gallagher, who joined the bank's credit training program in March of last year after completing a successful career as a colonel in the U.S. Air Force, had been the assistant manager for loans of the Pacific-Fruitland branch in Vernon since September.

Dividend

LOS ANGELES (BW) — The board of directors of Knudsen Corp. (OTC/KNUD) declared a regular quarterly dividend of 15 cents per share of common stock, payable Sept. 14, to shareholders of record as of Aug. 26.

This declaration represents 38 years of continuous cash dividends paid by the California-based dairy and food processor and distributor.

Explanation for Visa conversion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Forty-seven million bank credit cards around the world are being converted to "Visa" cards and at least some people are confused about the changeover. Here's what's going on.

The point of the conversion is to develop a single system whereby consumers from one state or country can use their cards wherever they go. In the process, many financial institutions have begun offering new services with the new cards.

"Visa isn't replacing the other cards around the world, it's just adding the word 'Visa,'" explains Lea Ann Van Houten of Visa U.S.A. Inc. "There's a whole recognition thing. People didn't realize they could use their cards outside their own states."

Visa U.S.A. is supplying some 2.1 million retail outlets worldwide with new Visa decals to inform travelers that their card is acceptable in other countries. For example, although you can use a BankAmericard at many stores in Japan, the decal on the window frequently says Sumitomocard, with the name derived from Sumitomo Bank. The same is true of Chargex in Canada.

"We feel this will help with the language barriers," Miss Van Houten said. "The clerk no longer has to think about whether his store takes this card or that card."

There may be some other benefits. Under the Visa system, cardholders buying abroad will get a slight break on currency exchange. The purchase slips will be exchanged at a wholesale bank rate rather than the over-the-counter rate. Miss Van Houten says this can sometimes save tourists three to five per cent on foreign purchases.

Miss Van Houten says a number of financial institutions are using the changeover to offer their cardholders additional services on the back of the new cards. These include such featutes as check-guarantee service or a card with the back programmed to activate the new cash-dispensing automatic tellers.

Visa has also attracted some new card issuers. Home Savings & Loan plans to issue Visacards.

Dollar decline misleading

U.S. economy going strong

WASHINGTON (LENS) — The slide of the dollar on the foreign exchanges continues.

But the fall has not particularly perturbed the Carter administration; floating rates are devised exactly for such adjustments and this is no precursor of a summer dollar crisis.

The dollar's fall is a reflection of the United States' trade deficit, estimated to be a record $25 billion this year. This is in large part due to the surprisingly healthy performance of the domestic economy, while the rest of the world stagnates.

Although the growth in the country's GNP for the second quarter of the year has not yet been released, it is expected to match the 6.9 per cent annual growth rate clocked up in the first quarter. This is considerably faster than had been thought possible six months ago. Conventional opinion still has it that in the second half of the year the growth rate will slacken off markedly.

There is little sign of that happening yet. In June the level of industrial output rose by 0.7 per cent, which was more than expected, and although much of this was the result of swelling inventories the fact that there was substantial growth in such basic industries as cars, iron and steel suggests that the slowdown, which undoubtedly will come, is still some way off.

Apart from a persistent lack of confidence, springing in part from the fear that the rest of the industrialized world will be unable to match up to America's performance and may therefore drag it back, there are few immediate bottlenecks in the domestic economy. Although retail sales and consumer credit have recently slackened off they are still running ahead of the rate of inflation.

The country's manufacturers are now operating at 83.5 per cent of their capacity, well up on the levels during the recession two years ago, yet still with plenty of room for growth before reaching the 88 per cent utilization which was the peak attained in 1973 and which proved a point where bottlenecks began to plague industry.

Much the same situation exists in the labor market: even with 90.6 million people now at work, a figure that has been on the rise for eight months, there is still an ample, indeed excessive, amount of labor available, with unemployment nudging up marginally in June to 7.1 per cent.

Nor is the old nagging fear of renewed inflation haunting the economy as much as before. Wholesale prices in June dropped sharply as it became clearer that the huge farm crop now ripening must inevitably mean lower food prices.

But it is not only food that is coming down, an index compiling the prices of 27 commodity futures is now at its lowest point for eight months. With figures like these, the Department of the Treasury may reasonably argue, what is a few points off the exchange rate?

Wall Street's titan has dramatic lead

The titan of Wall Street, according to a ranking of brokerage houses by Finance Magazine, is Merrill Lynch & Co. (also known in some quarters as "The Thundering Herd.") Merrill Lynch is so big that the next four on the list combined don't touch it. Here are the top 10:

Firm	Total
1. Merrill Lynch & Co.	$632 million
2. Salomon Bros	176 million
3. E.F. Hutton Group	136 million
4. Bache Halsey Stuart	128 million

6. Dean Witter & Co.	97 million
7. Goldman, Sachs	95 million
8. Loeb, Rhoades	89 million
9. First Boston	84 million
10. Stephens, Inc.	84 million

Merrill Lynch maintains 287 offices in the U.S. and around the world and employs 19,715. In contrast, the last firm — No. 304 — on Finance's list, Berney Perry & Co., has a total capital position of $122,024, maintains three offices and has 13 employees.

Weekly Wall Street

New tax laws puzzle experts

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street will be doing some uneasy watching and waiting in the next few weeks while President Carter readies his plan to reshape the federal tax laws.

Only some random, sketchy details of the President's proposals, which he aims to unveil in early September, have emerged so far.

And analysts in the financial community are expressing confusion and concern over the impact the package might have on business in general and the stock market in particular.

Not surprisingly, what concerns Wall Street is that the proposal, as eventually enacted, might have the effect of making stock market investments less attractive.

"We believe it is essential that the administration achieve a balanced program of tax reform — balanced as regards the benefits to both businessmen and consumers — which contains significant incentives to aid capital formation," the brokerage firm of Goldman, Sachs & Co. said.

"The myriad of tax proposals emanating from Washington are confusing, to say the least," said Leslie M. Pollack, chief investment officer at the brokerage firm of Shearson Hayden Stone.

"And they do not seem to reflect a full comprehension by the administration of the importance of capital formation in the fight against unemployment and foreign competition."

Amid such speculation and persisting doubts about the economic outlook, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials touched new 19-month lows last Tuesday and Wednesday.

A weak upturn in the following two sessions left the average at 888.69 by Friday's close, down 1.38 for the week.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks dipped .08 to 54.04, and the American Stock Exchange market value index lost .27 to 120.53.

Big Board volume dropped off to a daily average of 19.08 million shares from 22.79 million the week before.

The reasons for Wall Street's mixed feelings about the impending tax reform proposal are readily apparent.

It's expected to include measures aimed at encouraging capital investment by businesses. Carter administration officials also double taxtalked in the past of doing away with the socalled double taxation, at both the corporate and shareholder levels, of dividends.

But it is also considered likely that the President will call for ending the favored tax status of long-term capital gains.

HOMEMADE RECYCLING — Sam Simonoff of Chicago, sitting at table, uses a homemade hand-tamper to flatten the last of a load of beer cans he picked up in Lincoln Park. The 70-year-old retired welder, who says he can flatten 920 cans — 40 pounds — in about an hour, has collected more than 7,200 pounds of cans in the park and has been paid more than $1,000 by a recycling firm. He says he has lost 26 pounds since he started collecting.

Merger studied by Industry firms

CITY OF INDUSTRY (BW) — Archon Inc. announced that Iroquois Brands has approached Archon concerning the possible combination of the two companies, and that discussions of this subject will commence promptly.

Iroquois earlier announced that it had acquired from certain Archon stockholders options to purchase approximately 20 per cent of the outstanding shares of Archon.

Archon's management stressed that while there could be no assurance that the negotiations would result in any combination of the two companies, Archon plans to give careful consideration to any proposal made by Iroquois.

UPLAND NORTH — LEWIS HOMES

Stable costs seen in Upland

Developers' land cost affects home prices

The cost to the developer of the land upon which he built his homes has a lot to do with the price the buyer has to pay for the finished residences, notes the head of a large Southland buying firm.

"Sophisticated home buyers profit from that fact by choosing an attractive location where land costs still hold relatively stable," states Richard A. Lewis, president of Lewis Homes.

"You'll see such a situation reflected in our Upland North development in the fashionable foothill section of Upland," Lewis said. "I don't think we would have been able to duplicate them in a comparable location in Orange County without setting the price at least $30,000 higher."

Now in the framing stage, Upland North's 34 single-family homes are being built on 10,000-square-foot lot sites.

Until the first models are completed, sales are being conducted from a Lewis Homes sales office at 2210 Albright Avenue, west of the intersection of San Antonio Avenue and 22nd Street in Upland.

Upland North features homes measuring from 1,747 to 2,693 square feet of living area. They are being constructed in one-story, two-story and split-level elevations.

Purchase price is currently scaled from $79,000 to $105,000.

Included in the Upland North purchase price will be refrigerated air-conditioning as well as microwave ovens, instant hot water dispensers, automatic garage door openers and various other amenities.

Ceramic tile entry foyers, luminous ceiling kitchens and wood-burning fireplaces with log-lighters are other refinements noted. Buyers may also select from models with such amenities as wet bars, sunken living rooms and, "greenhouse window" kitchens and three-car garages.

Citizens' housing coalition formed

LOS ANGELES — A broad-based citizens group has been formed to work for an improved housing supply in Southern California. Chairman Ted Ellsworth, who also serves as Chairman of the Los Angeles County Area Agency on Aging, today announced formation of the Coalition for Housing . . . an organization composed of leaders from business, labor, the consumer movement, senior citizens, civic and community affairs.

"Our concern is that every family and every resident have the availability of decent, reasonably priced housing," Ellsworth said. "In recent years this has become increasingly difficult as the demand for housing has grown and the supply has eroded. Very simply, we feel that some positive steps should be taken right now to plan for an adequate housing market.

"Particularly hard hit by the dynamics of supply and demand in the housing market are those persons who must live on limited or fixed incomes. For those who depend upon Social Security payments or welfare benefits, there is very little flexibility.

Ellsworth outlined specific objectives and positions of the Coalition:

—Support the expansion of Federal, State and local programs designed to meet the housing needs of the elderly, the poor and the handicapped.

—Support substantial relief as a keystone of an over all property tax reform program for California.

—Encourage needed housing construction in Southern California.

—Support responsible governmental programs to maintain and upgrade neighborhoods in Southern California.

—Oppose excessive bureaucracy and paperwork which negatively inhibit the housing market.

Coalition President Howard Ruby, a prominent Los Angeles developer, emphasized the need to support "positive alternatives to rent control which has proven to be counterproductive in every community where it has been enacted. We believe that the Coalition can be a positive force in bringing about the kind of constructive partnership between the public and private sectors which is required if we are going to solve the difficult housing problems facing our community."

Other leading members of the Coalition include: Mrs. Anthony Barash, Attorney; Dr. Max W. Bay, Past president of Jewish Federation-Council, Los Angeles; Lola McAlpin-Grant, associate dean, Loyola University School of Law; Mr. Lyle Hall, president, Los Angeles City Firefighters; Dr. David Horner, physician; Mrs. Grace Payne, executive director, Westminister Neighborhood Association; Milton J. Brock, Jr., chairman, Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce Housing Task Force; Jerry Crimmins, Los Angeles Building Trades Council; Ed Hulac, California Apartment Association; Norman Jacobson, President of the Los Angeles Board of Realty; John Jurenka, California Apartment Association; Larry Kates, California Housing Council; Harris Lasky, Building Industry Association; Roger L. Norton, President of the Southern California Mortgage Bankers Association; and Joseph Yousem, Institute of Real Estate Management.

Realtor chief believes so

Speculation boom waning?

Although California home prices continue to climb for the seventh consecutive month, the president of the California Association of Realtors said that he believes the "Gold Rush of speculation," a partial cause of the current price boom, has seen its day.

Speaking before Peninsula area Realtors in San Mateo, Jerome Blank of Albany, head of the 100,000-member statewide Realtors organization, today released results of his organization's latest survey of sales prices for existing homes, which revealed a new median high for the month of May of $60,356, a 3.5 per cent increase from the previous month and a 28 per cent climb from a year ago.

In making the report, Blank said that he sees several signs of stabilization in the market and predicted a leveling-off of prices and a possible downward trend in interest rates.

"The shortage of housing in California produced runaway prices in many areas and speculation by some buyers to cash-in on a fast profit," Blank said. "It appears that recent actions by the lending institutions to channel mortgage money to owner occupants only, are helping to curb the rash speculation and I foresee a downward trend in interest rates as lender's begin to catch-up on the backlog of demand and become more aggressive in the marketplace."

Blank said he believes that California is beginning to approach a "healthy balance" in the real estate marketplace which would benefit both buyers and sellers with greater selection of housing opportunities.

Referring back to the price survey, he noted that the $50,000-to-$59,999 category showed the greatest frequency of sales during the month of May (17.5 per cent), followed by homes in the $90,000 and over price range (16.9 per cent).

The $40,000-to-$49,999 bracket, sales leader a year ago, now represents only 15.9 per cent of the market.

Three bedroom homes, regardless of price bracket, continue to show greatest buyer demand (53.9 per cent), followed by four-or-more bedrooms (27.1 per cent).

Blank explained that the figures were based upon data taken from a cross-section of 28 reporting Boards of Realtors in metropolitan areas throughout the state, representing approximately 40 per cent of his Association's membership.

He added that the "median" price figure used in the report was the midpoint of all submitted home sales, rather than an "average" sales price.

Rent control hearings set

A number of the 4,000-member Los Angeles Board of Realtors, led by President Norman Jacobson, are expected to attend a rent control hearing in City Council Chambers next week.

The hearing is set Thursday at 2 p.m. before the Council's Governmental Efficiency Committee, chaired by Seventh District Councilman Ernani Bernardi.

Realtor, Realtor-Associates and Affiliate members of the Los Angeles Board will testify in opposition to rent control.

The hearing is expected to cover both the general issue of rent control and a specific proposal introduced in the form of a motion to the council by Second District Councilman Joel Wachs. It is understood Wachs' proposal concerns the establishment of a rental arbitration board within the City Council to hear complaints from tenants who believe their rents are being raised at an unreasonable rate.

A number of other organizations — all in opposition to any form of rent control in Los Angeles — are expected to testify at the August 11 hearing.

Women to hear speaker

The Los Angeles Association of Professional Mortgage Women will hear Allen Smith speak on "The FLIP Loan — What It Is and How It Works," when they meet for dinner at the Wilshire Hyatt House on Thursday.

Smith is president of FLIP Mortgage Corporation of Newtown, Pennsylvania and creator of the FLIP concept. The Flexible Loan Insurance Program is designed to bring home ownership within reach of many who could not qualify under the more rigid loan programs with which we are familiar.

Anyone wishing to attend should phone Mary Meredith at 244-8111 by Tuesday noon.

Construction Superintendent honored

Rowland Heights resident, Robert Welborn, a construction superintendent for Ernest W. Hahn, Inc., general contractors of Hawthorne, Ca., has been honored for his outstanding record of on-site safety during the past year.

One of the nation's largest builders of commercial buildings, the Hahn company has in recent years also established itself as a leader in commercial construction safety.

Since the initiation of an accelerated company safety program in 1962, the firm has compiled one of the lowest time-loss-accident records in the industry, while at the same time building its annual construction activity past the $125 million mark.

June housing starts up

New housing starts in California during June increased to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 252,000 units, up 10 per cent from 229,000 units the previous month, Bank of America reported.

The June rate also was up 25 per cent from June of last year.

Bank economists said they expect the rate of new starts to continue in the 250,000 to 275,000 units range for the second half of the year.

Actual housing starts in the state for the first six months of the year were up 48 per cent to 133,606 from 90,086 in the same period last year. Single-family dwellings accounted for 88,152 or two-thirds of the new total, and were up 49 per cent from last year's 58,976 single-family starts.

Top sales office named

Herbert Hawkins' North Arcadia sales office has been named the firm's number one producer for the second quarter, 1977, with sales of $16.50 million during that three-month period.

It's the second time this year that the office has won the quarterly award with total sales for the year standing at $30.25 million. Manager Glenn Allen accepted a plaque on behalf of his staff at a recent Quarterly Awards Breakfast at Griswold's in Claremont. Over 350 Hawkins sales associates and executives attended.

Tony Antoun, also of the North Arcadia staff, was named top earner for the second quarter and Sheila Trigon of Temple City won honors as top lister with 31 to her credit for the three-month period.

Second place in the western division of San Gabriel Valley went to the Hawkins Alhambra office with 205 sales for a total of $13.75 million for the quarter. Arcadia placed third with sales of $9.25 million, including cooperative sales.

In the eastern division, Glendora topped all with 122 transactions and sales of $7 million. Upland placed second with $5.75 million and West Covina was third with quarterly sales over $5 million.

Lost dollars in mailroom

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — While business cannot do much about postage rates, they can hold down the cost of mailing business letters, says Samuel J. Paul, manager of Pitney Bowes' Postal Education Center.

Paul cited a recent study by the Dartnell Institute of Business Research, showing that the average mailing cost for a business letter, not including postage, is 25 cents. Mailing includes the work of gathering, sealing, stamping and sorting — all the tasks not performed by the letterwriter or secretary.

"A well-organized mailroom," Paul advises, "can save as much as one-third the cost of mailing a business letter."

School financing: educational 'equity' is the issue

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

Amidst a storm of misunderstanding and speculation, the California Legislature is expected to adopt some sort of school finance bill in the coming months.

The result of the much-discussed Serrano vs. Priest decision, the finance bill will radically affect the method Californians use to finance their public schools. It is the bill — far more than the decision — that will carry the load for changing school finance.

Speculation has run rampant since the ruling was handed down and finally approved by the state Supreme Court last December on just what the decision means. This has resulted in a great deal of information of an erroneous nature. In fact, Serrano will not:

—Outlaw local property taxes as a means of financing public schools.

—Require that all schools spend the same amount of money for the education of each child.

—Order the state to assume 100 per cent of all local school costs.

—Abolish local control of public schools.

—Rule out the possibility that local property tax revenues might still be part of an acceptable school finance system.

What the court did decide, in essence, was that funding public education on the basis of a district's wealth is unconstitutional. The court was concerned with "equity" in financing education, not in providing "quality" in education, although it did note that the two concepts are invariably linked.

While the basic problem is one of a district with low property wealth not being able to raise as much money locally as a district with high property wealth, the variables and fine points within that basic proposition are staggering.

Basically, school districts in California get their money from three sources: local revenue raised from local property taxes; state "foundation" assistance aimed at supplementing the local income; and state "categorical" funding which can be either state or federal money distributed by the state for special needs such as compensatory or bilingual education.

In 1968, John Serrano believed his son was being treated unfairly. His son attended an elementary school in the Baldwin Park Unified School District where annual per pupil expenditures were only $577. At the same time, nearby Pasadena was spending $840 per pupil and Beverly Hills was spending more than $1,200 per pupil.

Serrano and nine other parents joined forces to file suit on behalf of themselves as taxpayers and their 27 children as students, claiming that California's system of financing public education unfairly discriminated against them because they happened to live in a low-wealth school district that couldn't afford the kind of educational spending possible in higher wealth districts.

When the case went to court, Serrano was the first of the 10 parents to be named on the legal papers involved. The then state treasurer, Ivy Baker Priest, was the first state official to be listed as a defendant and the case came to be known as Serrano vs. Priest.

The court handed down its decision agreeing with Serrano's contention, stating that the state Legislature has created a school finance system that makes "the quality of educational opportunity available to a student dependent upon the wealth of the district in which he lives."

There are two interrelated issues within the Serrano decision.

The first is disparities within per pupil expenditures due to local district wealth.

The second is disparities in local tax effort. Low-wealth districts usually raise less money per pupil with higher tax rates than high-wealth districts do with lower tax rates.

The decision requires that the state achieve equity on both counts, stating:

—Differences in annual per pupil expenditures due to local wealth must not exceed $100.

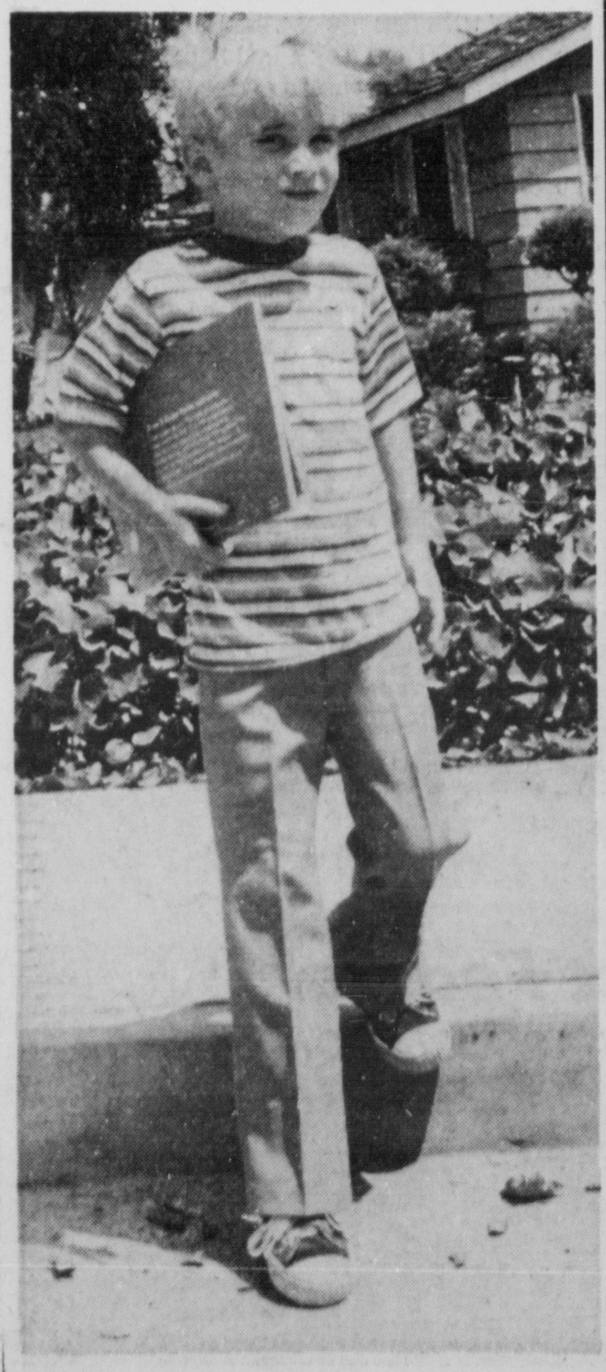
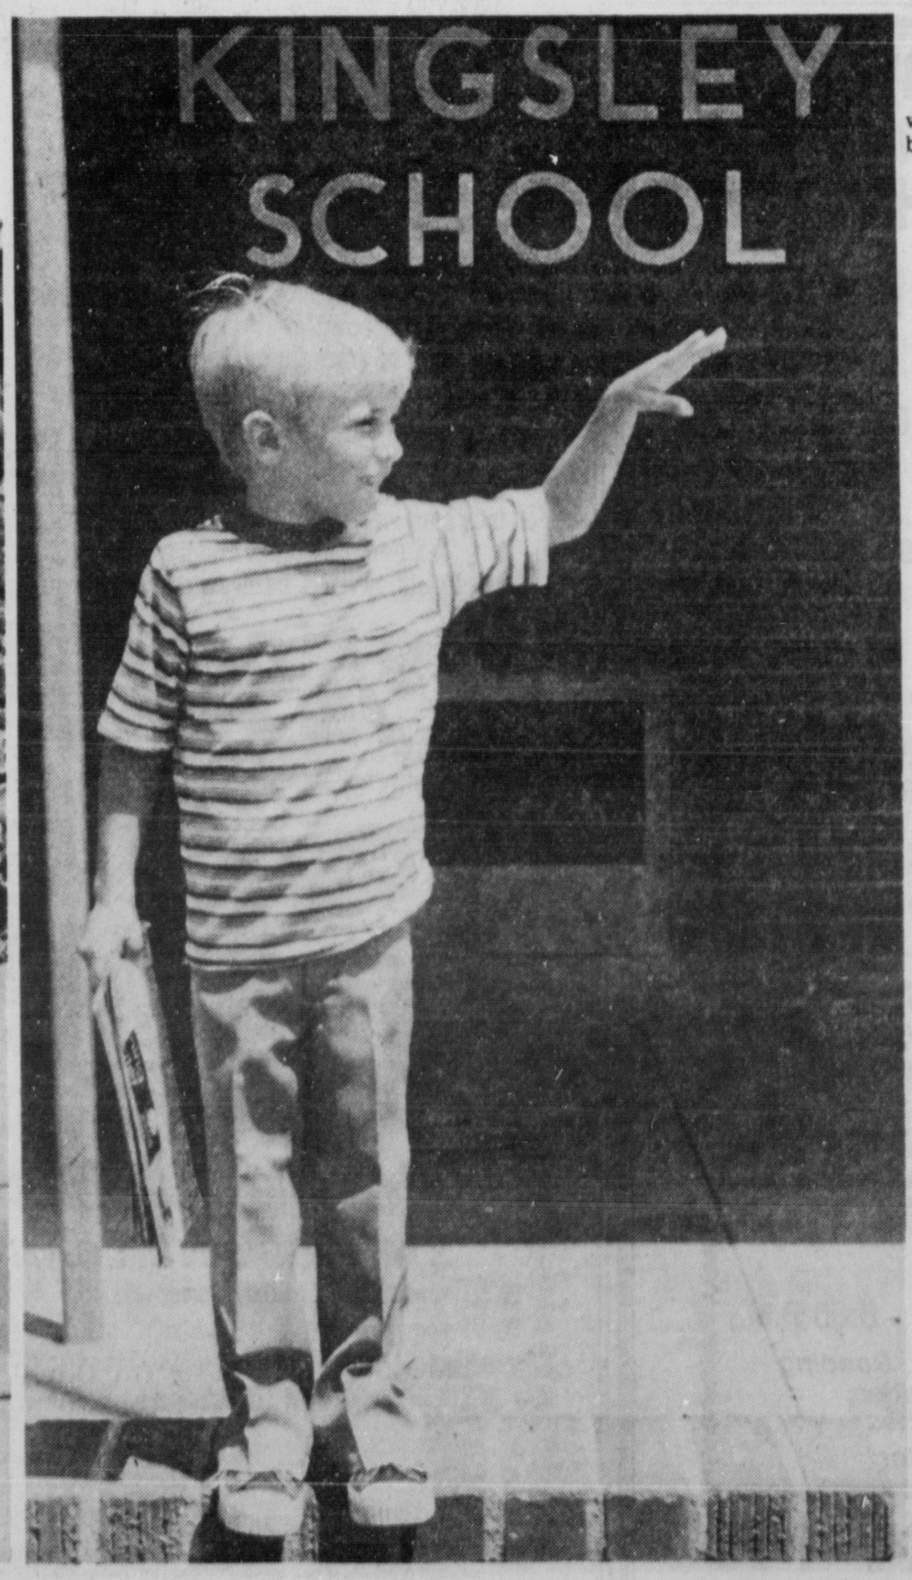
GETTING READY — Billy Baird, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan H. Baird of Pomona, will be six on the first day of school this year. Far left, Billy wakes up and thinks about school opening. By breakfast time, center, Billy's not so sure he'll really like the first grade. One of the hardest things about attending school is saying goodbye to Midnight, Billy's dog, above.

First day of school looms; valley youngsters preparing

TO SCHOOL AND BACK — Billy Baird attended kindergarden last year, so he's aware of being careful when he crosses the street on the way to school, below. Left, standing in front of Pomona's Kingsley School where he'll be a first grader, Billy waves a greeting to the hundreds of others who will join him when classes start.





Billy Baird, buddies to brave bookwork

Billy Baird of Pomona will celebrate his sixth birthday by starting his first day in school on Sept. 14.

Billy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan H. Baird, will enter Kingsley School, Pomona.

The tow-headed youngsters will be one of the thousands of students flocking back to school this fall, some with enthusiasm, others reluctantly.

Students and their parents are now starting the last-minute purchases of school clothes, shoes, lunch pails, pencils and tablets.

The schools, too, are receiving the final cleaning, painting and restocking of supplies.

New programs listed

Pomona district classes expecting 20,000-plus

School will begin Sept. 14 for the 20,000-plus students in the Pomona Unified School District with a variety of new programs and facilities waiting to welcome students back for the 1977-78 school year.

The year was to have started on Sept. 13 but district officials and trustees were caught in a bind when they learned Rosh Hashana fell on the previously planned opening day. By moving the starting day back one day, trustees cut the school year to the minimum under the law, 175 days.

Schools Supt. Charles Carpenter will open the year with a new look at the Education Center, 800 S. Garey Ave. with new assistant superintendents for business and educational services as well as a newly reorganized administrative staff.

The classroom level will see a return to the six period day at the senior high schools, a new fine arts program for students in the primary grades and improved field trip programs for the schools.

Also scheduled to open in the fall will be a new fine arts center at Garey High School and a continuation and adult school facility which is expected to open at mid year. Under construction during the year will be the new cafeteria at Marshall Junior High School, and modifications to Hamilton Elementary School's cafeteria.

The district will also greet three new elementary school principals and a new adult school principal in the fall.

Trustees are: C. Allen Braswell, an owner of convalescent homes, Don Donnelly, a Los Angeles County fireman and labor relations consultant, Francis Livingston, an occupational therapist, C. J. Mendoza, a school administrator in Whittier and Eugene E. Whitlock Jr., a business management consultant.

Speculation abounds in school tax reform issue—

—The relative effort required of local taxpayers for school purposes must be nearly the same throughout the state.

—Both pupils and taxpayers must receive equal protection under the law.

The California Supreme Court has given the Legislature until September of 1980 to develop a system that meets the court's requirements.

The Legislature now has its work cut out for it as it attempts to provide a bill which will meet the court's ruling and also consider the vast variables in school finance.

Ten miles northwest of Sacramento for example, is the Del Paso Heights school district, one of the four poorest districts in the state.

The Del Paso tax base consists of block after block of deteriorating suburban homes. There is no commercial or industrial tax support.

The entire assessed value of the district is $7.04 million, allowing $3,913 in taxable real estate for each of the district's 1,800 students. A $4.09 per $100 assessed valuation raised $260 per child last year.

About 300 miles to the south in the middle of a Kern County oil field is the McKittrick school district. The assessed value in this district is $46.78 million. The district has 36 students, allowing for a tax base of $1.29 million per child. This is 332 times greater than the Del Paso tax base. McKittrick has the lowest tax rate in the state, 31 cents per $100 assessed valuation. It also raises the most money per student, $5,174.50 last year.

While the inequities here are gross and obvious, it is also fair to note that the problem has not been totally ignored. State funds for poor districts have tripled in recent years and rich districts are getting less.

McKittrick gets only $175 per pupil while Del Paso receives $1,030 per pupil per year from the state. McKittrick gets no federal funds while Del Paso gets nearly $320 per child.

But even when all the state and federal equalization dollars are added in, the Del Paso Heights tax rate is still 13 times the McKittrick tax rate and McKittrick still spends $3 per child for every $1 Del Paso spends.

But the differences implicit here serve as only a starting point for the Legislature's problems. There are, in the state, high-wealth districts with poor residents and low-wealth districts with more affluent residents. The highest tax rate in the state is in Berkeley which has a tax base 30 per cent higher than the state average.

But Berkeley voters tax themselves heavily to pay for extras that other districts might do without.

Further complicating things are the high-wealth districts which impose a low tax rate and operate with only a minimum program.

Local districts in the valley qualify as low-wealth districts. That is, there is not sufficient assessed value to adequately support the number of students in the districts.

In Pomona, the district is hoping for additional $500,000 to $750,000 this year when the state finally reaches agreement on a finance measure. The Claremont board has adopted the highest tax rate in the valley, $6.39 per $100 assessed valuation to provide its program amid a more affluent community. Pomona will eventually decide on a tax rate within a nickel of $5 per $100 assessed valuation in a not so affluent community.

The variables, even locally, are many.

A conference committee of state senators and assemblymen will be hammering out a final agreement on a finance bill to impose the court mandates in the coming months. Two bills are being considered, one from the Senate and one from the Assembly, with the latter by far the more expensive; $5.029 billion to $3.7 billion.

Where will the state get the money to fund these very complex formulas for state school finance?

Assemblyman David Stirling, R-64th, Hacienda Heights, says the money at the outset will come from the state's $2.5 billion reserve. But further down the line, financing will become a bigger and bigger question.

"You can't talk about school finance reform without talking about property tax reform," says Stirling. "The two are interrelated."

Stirling said it is still difficult to speculate about a final bill to be adopted for school finance while property tax reform is still up in the air.

If property tax is no longer going to be emphasized in public education the money will have to come from somewhere else. Stirling says this will also involve serious questions about state income tax

Stirling says inflationary raises granted employes in California have gone to the development of the massive state reserves. While a person may receive a 6 per cent cost of living raise, said Stirling, his tax increase may be as much as 20 per cent as a result of that raise.

Stirling advocates indexing the income tax to adjust for cost-of-living raises, but notes that such action would serve to also reduce the state reserves from which the increased education expenditures will come.

"We have moved from a point where we used to battle inflation, to a point where inflation was something we had to tolerate and now to a place where inflation is something we have come to depend on to bring in revenue," said Stirling, a member of the Assembly's Revenue and Taxation Committee.

Of the two school finance bills now being considered by the legislature, SB 525 by Sen. Albert Rodda, D-5th, Sacramento, and AB 65 by Assemblyman Leroy Greene, D-3rd, Carmichael, Stirling notes the following major points.

—Both versions provide similar increases in the state "foundation" program with the Senate version offering more money the first three years and the Assembly version more funding the fourth and fifth years.

—The Assembly version phases out basic aid (the $125 all districts automatically receive per pupil) over the next five years. The Senate bill makes no such change.

—The Assembly version permits the state to recapture any tax reductions in high-wealth districts following a complex formula. The Senate version is far more sparing in its recapture procedure.

—Both bills require all districts to levy minimum property tax rates.

—Both bills propose somewhat different methods of narrowing the range of expenditures between high-wealth and low-wealth districts.

—Both bills eliminate "slippage", reduction in the state's share of education costs caused by greater-than-anticipated increases in local tax revenues due to escalating property values.

—Both bills allow additional funds for "variable costs" such as transportation, insurance, utilities and maintenance.

—The Assembly version would include funds to expand the Early Childhood Education (ECE) program to 75 per cent of children in the first six grades. The Senate bill makes no comparable change for ECE.

—Both measures provide for increased state and local contributions to the state Teachers Retirement System. The Assembly version seeks a 60-40 split with the local districts paying the lion's share. The Senate version proposes the exact opposite.

—The Assembly bill would provide a five-year phase in funding for the Master Plan for Special Education. This would include inflation adjustments. The Senate bill provides no such funding.

—The Assembly version provides $10 million annually to increase the instructional materials allocation by $2.99 per pupil with an inflation adjustment factor. The Senate bill makes no such provision.

Stirling notes that costs for these bills are estimated by the legislative analyst and others to exceed anticipated available state resources by the fourth and fifth years and may therefore result in a tax increase.

This problem will be exacerbated, said Stirling, by the amount of permanent property tax relief enacted this session of the Legislature.

As late as Aug. 1, Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post, in reporting before the committee on school finance reform said there was not sufficient money available to fund either the Rodda or Greene bills without significant reductions in health and welfare spending. Post also told legislators he felt that neither of the bills would satisfy the court's Serrano decision and that to do so would require another $700 million beyond the maximum now proposed.

The outcome of all the haggling remains to be seen although the local school districts are anticipating additional money from Sacramento during the 1977-78 school year. Throughout the first weeks of August, as the local districts began adopting their final budgets they also adopted measures which would allow for the automatic inclusion in their budgets of any funds coming from the passage of SB 525 or AB 65.

College gifts set

NEW YORK (AP) — Voluntary donations to American colleges and universities reached an all-time high of about $2.4 billion in the 1975-76 academic year, according to a survey conducted annually by the Council for Financial Aid to Education (CFAE).

The figure represents an increase of $250 million, or 11.6 per cent, according to CFAE officials who said last year was the first time that the increase in gifts kept pace with the increase in educational expenses. The officials expressed hope that voluntary donations will once again be a major factor in supporting higher education.

Individual supporters accounted for the biggest portion of the increase in donations.

Claremont is planning school's dress up

The Claremont Unified School District will begin dressing up its continuation high school, San Antonio High School this year along with providing more funds in its budget for additional library books at school libraries.

The 6,039 students expected on opening day Sept. 12 will represent moderate growth in the district which has been and will continue for the next few years to be faced by growth in the northeast portion of the district.

Upland classes start Sept. 12

About 6,100 students will enter fall classes in the Upland Elementary School District on Sept. 12, an increase of 100 students over last year.

Supt. George Renworth said the anticipated rehabilitation of Upland Elementary School is the biggest building project for next year. It hinges on the awarding of a federal public works grant of $1,105,000, however. The district applied for the funds recently.

Renworth said the district will undertake a federally-funded staff development program in the coming year, which includes inservice training for teachers.

Some minor boundary changes also are underway, which feature the shifting of students from the northern part of the district to the southern portion to relieve overcrowding.

Upland school board members include Barry Brandt, president; Bill Rugg, Dale Andersen, Robert Ellis and Dina Ross Hunter. The district's property tax rate is $3.01 per $100 of assessed valuation.

CONTEMPLATING — Two students pause for perhaps a moment of contemplation at Cal Poly Pomona. They will be only "numbers" this fall when 14,600 pupils return to the campus.

Scripps College slates opening

Scripps College's fall semester begins Sept. 6 when President and Mrs. John H. Chandler host an informal reception for Scripps students and their families.

A picnic lunch on the President's lawn will be held that same afternoon. And as part of orientation week, new students will be joining Scripps' faculty and administrators for small, informal dinners at their homes.

On Oct. 18, Scripps College and Newspaper Enterprises Association (NEA) will jointly celebrate their founder's 141st birthday and the college's 50th. Ellen Browning Scripps and her half-brother, Edward Willis Scripps, founded the NEA and Science Service in 1902, and Miss Scripps later established Scripps College in Claremont. The Founder's Day event will take place at Garrison Theater, and guest speaker will be Robert Metz, president and editor of NEA.

Scripps anticipates a varied cultural season this year. The Pacific Art Trio, the Scripps music faculty and guest performers are preparing for an assortment of musical evenings; Michael Lamkin, the new director of the concert choir of Claremont Men's, Harvey Mudd, Pitzer and Scripps Colleges, is planning a variety of guest appearances in addition to the annual winter and spring concerts. The Four College Players will have a continuation of last year's productions, though no specifics on performances have been revealed. The Scripps student coffeehouse, "A Motley to the View," has announced plans to expand its culinary offerings.

WALNUT'S 4TH SCHOOL — The new Walnut Elementary School will open for its first full year of classes this fall. The school actually opened last April as the fourth Walnut school in the district's history. The Walnut Valley district will be searching out additional school sites this year while also developing plans for the new Diamond Bar High School.

Baptist school slates opening

Calvary Baptist School in La Verne will open its doors Sept. 12 for approximately 240 preschool through high school students.

Located at the corner of Damien and Forestdale streets, the school is hoping to expand its elective course offerings this school year while still maintaining its very active athletic program in all grades. The school has 20 faculty members and is located on the grounds of the Calvary Baptist Church.

Paul Reese is the principal.

Placed with other children

New law requires change for handicapped classes

A federal law that requires schools to educate handicapped children together with the nonhandicapped goes into effect this fall.

Public Law 94-142 is the Education for All Handicapped Children Act.

The law stipulates that a free appropriate public education shall be made available to all handicapped children between the ages of 3 and 18 — and to those between 18 and 21 by fall of 1980.

A detailed educational plan must be drawn up for handicapped children, and they must be brought into the same classroom with non-handicapped pupils.

Presently, handicapped students such as those suffering mental retardation or physical disability, are educated in special classes designed for them.

Handicapped students must have available the same range and variety of school programs now available to other students, under the new law. This includes non-academic and extracurricular activities.

The law has raised questions from school officials, and few districts are really prepared for the changes. Most valley school districts have acted, however, to include funds for the handicapped program in their 1977-78 budgets.

Chaffey plans to welcome students

Seven high schools within the Chaffey Joint Union High School District will welcome a total of 13,000 students when fall classes begin on Sept. 12.

That means an increase of about 400 students over last year, according to district officials.

Schools in the district include Ontario, Chaffey, Upland, Alta Loma, Montclair, Valley View and Mountain high schools.

Ten new relocatable classrooms have been added at Alta Loma High in attempts by the district to solve an overcrowding problem at the campus. More than 2,200 students are attending the school that was built to house 1,800.

Supt. Mike Dirksen expects larger enrollments at Ontario and possibly Upland High also in the fall. But the district has no immediate plans to add new classrooms.

Graduation requirements have been made stiffer, in accordance with new regulations, for this fall's incoming freshmen. Students now will be required to take 220 units in order to graduate, as compared to the previous requirement of 210.

Competency tests are being readied, also in accord with new laws. Students will have to pass the tests on basic subjects such as reading and math in order to receive a diploma.

Members of the Chaffey school board include Adrian Chalfant, president; Jack Carnine, Raymond Sarrio, Charles Uhalley and Martha Chapman.

LONG BUILDING — The basic outside structure has been finished on this 11-classroom building at Los Serranos Elementary School in Chino. But work still must be done inside if it is to be ready for occupancy by September. The classroom structure was part of building program.

Central school classes slated

About 2,360 students are expected to enroll for fall classes in the Central School District in Cucamonga starting Sept. 12.

The student population will represent a 10 per cent increase over last year, according to Supt. Donald Sperry.

Growing pains are the biggest problem in the district now, with 5,400 new homes expected to be built by 1981, said Sperry.

There will be double sessions this fall at all three district schools — Valle Vista and Central elementary schools and Cucamonga Junior High, Sperry said. Students will attend half-day sessions in the primary grades and in the sixth grade.

The district recently passed a $10 million bond issue and state loan request which will provide for much-needed new buildings. The problem is that it will be at least a year before the construction program can get underway, Sperry explained.

A new program for physically handicapped students will get underway this fall. It will involve identifying those students and providing assistance for them in the classroom.

Central school board members include Richard Clements, Pamela Wright, Ruth Musser, president, Dr. Thomas Shoar and Dale Taylor. The district tax rate is $2.4896.

DING DONG — The old clock on the wall at Roosevelt Elementary School in Pomona no longer controls the school bells, but Principal George Eubank still feels it could. The clock was installed in the original Roosevelt School (named for Teddy, not Franklin) and when the new one was built was saved for its sentimental and historic value. Eubank says the district has rejected offers of several hundred dollars for the clock which, he claims, was somewhat more proficient than the new electrical system.

Academy finds a new site

Moving to a new site on the southeast corner of Towne Avenue and Arrow Highway in Pomona will be the biggest and newest achievement for American Christian Academy this fall. Classes for the high school, junior high and elementary students begin Sept. 7.

Principal Wayne Temple is enthusiastic about the new high school facility in the former shopping center, saying the market building will be converted to house the gymnasium and several classrooms. The entire redevelopment of the area will be an ongoing three- to five-year program, said Temple.

ACA also hopes to expand its junior high school athletic program this year and bring in several new faculty members while also increasing the curriculum in vocational education. Total enrollment surpasses 425 students.

Founded by Rev. Ray Batema, the school will begin its eighth year in the fall.

Serving San Dimas, La Verne

Bonita schools open for 7,600 students Sept. 12

School opens Sept. 12 for the 7,600 students in the Bonita Unified School District which serves San Dimas and La Verne.

The 12-school district headed by Supt. James Johnson is the only district in the valley which still operates a complete school bus service. The 50-square miles making up the district is one reason for the buses. District boundaries extend from the Via Verde hills near the San Bernardino Freeway in San Dimas to San Dimas Canyon and the Angeles National Forest on the north.

This large area, combined with the number of freeways cutting across the district, create the need for the bus service. The district owns and operates 14 buses.

While growth in the district has been nonexistent over the past few years, it has held its own and not lost students as many districts have.

This school year should be an interesting one because the district was one of only two in Los Angeles County which failed to reach agreement with its teacher organization on a labor contract last year. Teacher and district representatives are expected to sit down this month and begin work on a new contract.

This year's Bonita budget will fall in the $12 million range. Approving that budget will be the five-member board composed of A. Eugene Bowers, a manager for the Metropolitan Water District; A Robert Rimpau, a land developer; Vera Mae Gephart, a housewife; Lowell D. Godfrey, an optometrist and Robert Green, a data processing engineer.

Interest growing in life sciences

First biologist to join Harvey Mudd program

WILLIAM PURVES

Harvey Mudd College will expand its scope this fall when the first biologist joins the engineering and science college.

The college will add biology classes in which engineering, chemistry, physics and mathematics will be applied to problems of living organisms. Ultimately, the classes will lead to student work on the design of biomedical instruments, sight and hearing problems, and biological systems for energy production.

"Student interest in the life sciences is growing by leaps and bounds," said Samuel Tanenbaum, dean of faculty. "Today, biology is as popular among the brightest students as nuclear physics was 20 years ago and space sciences 10 years ago."

Adding biology to an engineering-science curriculum reflects prevailing opinion that biological problems will be solved more frequently by interdisciplinary science research, he said.

William K. Purves, chairman of the biological sciences division at the University of Connecticut, will teach the biology classes and supervise biology-related research and student projects. His appointment was made recently when he was chosen for the Stuart Mudd Chair in biology.

Purves taught biology, botany and biochemistry at UC Santa Barbara for 12 years. He was chairman of the biological sciences department there in 1973.

Teaching already underway in biochemistry and biophysics will now be intensified at Harvey Mudd. Also new opportunities will open up in bioengineering and biomathematics. Potential areas of student interest include the design of replacement parts for humans, prediction of epidemics, population genetics, waste disposal and biological membrane functions.

Initially no major in biology is planned nor will an independent department be set up. Harvey Mudd is one of the six Claremont Colleges and its students can choose from a variety of traditional biology classes taught at the other colleges.

"We are shaping a program for students with strong backgrounds in mathematics and the physical sciences," said President D. Kenneth Baker. "Our nation and the world face grave problems of energy and quality of life, and only a truly interdisciplinary effort can help to solve them."

Webb set to start new year

Webb School of California in Claremont will open classes for its 240 students Sept. 12 and will institute a new program offering 10 students an opportunity to live in France with a member of the faculty during the fall semester and another 10 students to live in Spain during the spring semester.

Founded by the late Thompson Webb in 1922, Webb had an international student body last year, having attracted students from as many as 17 foreign countries while also enrolling 60 day students from the Pomona Valley.

The school's renowned Raymond M. Alf Museum of Natural History will have a new curator this year, Grant Meyer.

Webb last year reached the finals of the CIF 1-A baseball playoffs and also participated in playoffs in soccer, swimming, tennis, track and golf.

Stephen Longley is the headmaster.

Lutheran high set to open

School begins Aug. 30 for the 200 students at Lutheran High School of La Verne located on Fruit Street north of Foothill Boulevard.

The school will begin its first full year at its own campus. The new school actually opened last winter. Prior to that, the 17-member faculty and school had been located in a variety of places.

The school offers both college preparatory studies as well as courses in vocational education. A full athletic program is also offered at the ninth through 12th grade high school.

Pastor William Hampton is the principal.

MSAC officials to open classes

Officials are expecting more than 20,000 students when fall semester classes open Sept. 12 at Mt. San Antonio College.

Registration for day and evening classes is in progress. Further information on deadlines, schedules and majors may be obtained by calling the "Quick Line," 598-2811, ext. 213.

John Randall will meet his first students this fall, after having taken office as the college's fifth superintendent Aug. 1. Randall was appointed at a special meeting of the board of trustees on June 13 to fill the position vacated by the early retirement of Eldon Pearce. Pearce served as president - superintendent for five years, and was the college's vice president and assistant director of business services for 13 years. He will leave the college Aug. 31.

Randall comes to MSAC from Cerritos College, Norwalk, where he has served since 1959, most recently as assistant superintendent-vice president of instruction. He was appointed to the MSAC presidency following a search by a campus-wide selection committee and a personal interview by the trustees.

Randal is a graduate of USC, Cal State Long Beach, and has completed graduate work at USC, UCLA, and Cal State Long Beach. He and his wife, Barbara, live in West Covina.

The new board members will also greet fall students for the first time this year. Alfred Diaz, Pomona, and Kenneth Hunt, Hacienda Heights, took office this April after their election in March. The recent resignation of board President Richard Todd, Pomona, leaves the board at four members until its Aug. 24 meeting. Upon acceptance of Todd's resignation, the trustees appointed Frances Maschio, La Puente, as provisional trustee, to fill the unexpired term to March 1979. Other members of the board are William Temple, Covina, and Travis Manning, Hacienda Heights.

The college's new Child Development Center will be ready to accept some 75 youngsters when classes begin in September. The new facility, on the north edge of the campus, will serve the children of MSAC students. Registration for the service will be handled by the Student Services Office.

Schools program debated

The controversial year-round school program may, or may not be, the answer to overcrowded classrooms.

In Chino, where the program has been used district-wide since 1974-75, students attend school in nine-week blocks, and then are off for three weeks. By using four tracks of students, one group is always on a three-week vacation at any time throughout the school year.

School officials say that with one group off at all times, "the district can make better use of building space and can house 25 per cent more students in each building."

Opponents of the program, however, claim that while it may save space, it does not save dollars. And if it saves building room, why did Chino have to pass bonds to build new schools?

School authorities answer that YRS only slows down overcrowding and does not stop it. New buildings are still needed — but at least they don't have to be constructed as rapidly.

Walnut school officials are now considering a year-round program along the lines of Chino's plan.

YRS is just one method of solving overcrowding, but it seems to be popular at the moment. Administrators are not as strong in their feelings toward relocatable classrooms or other temporary solutions. They seem to feel YRS is a better method.

Pomona College marks start

Pomona College, founding member of the Claremont Colleges, will celebrate its 90th anniversary with a number of special events being planned during the 1977-78 academic year.

This marks the first year of the new "early-in early-out" academic calendar recently adopted by the five members of the undergraduate Claremont Colleges.

Classes start on Sept. 9, and President David Alexander will officially open the fall semester at opening convocation ceremonies on Sept. 10.

Expected college enrollment is 1,300, including 392 entering freshmen. Orientation for freshmen from Sept. 6 through Sept. 13 will include academic advising, a departmental fair, parents' orientation, a welcome from the president, and such activities as a barbecue, pool party, library tours, and the traditional Turf dinner and square dance. An organ concert, open to the public, will be held on Sept. 8, in Bridges Hall of Music at 8:15 p.m.

The college's curriculum will include new general educational distribution requirements, especially in the humanities division. The college's career Planning and Placement Center will offer numerous student internship programs which provide professional experience outside academic course work. The expanded and renovated Montgomery Art Gallery is scheduled to re-open Sept. 17

Lawn watering

Lawn watering should be adjusted according to the weather, advises the Colorado State University Extension Service. After a heavy rain, don't give the lawn its regular watering until the grass needs it. Automatic sprinkling systems should be shut off until needed again, the extension says.

400-student increase expected in Alta Loma

About 3,100 students will enter classes in the Alta Loma Elementary School District for the fall semester starting Sept. 12.

That figure represents a 400-student increase over last year, according to Supt. Floyd Stork.

Stork's four-school district has been facing unprecedented growth. This has caused overcrowded classrooms and double sessions.

Stork says there will be double sessions at the primary grade level in three schools next fall — Jasper, Carnelian and Alta Loma. There were half-day sessions only in the first two grades at Alta Loma last year.

A $6.6 million bond issue passed by voters a year and a half ago has permitted the district to put up much-needed new buildings. Additions have been completed at Alta Loma Junior High and Jasper will have 13 more classrooms by next February.

The new Floyd Stork School should be ready by fall of 1978.

Alta Loma school board members include Earle Anderson, president; Nancy Kettle, Dr. Wayne Brindley, and Robert Tangeman. A fifth member will be chosen soon to replace Paul Sage who recently resigned.

In kindergarten through 12th grade

Career planning program set for Walnut students

A new kindergarten through 12th grade career planning program will greet the anticipated 7,494 students in the Walnut Valley Unified School District when they return to school Sept. 12.

Walnut is the fastest growing district in the valley with an 11 per cent increase in enrollment this September over a year ago. The district will have 752 more students this year.

To solve its crowding situation, the district has begun investigation into the year round school concept which enables a school designed to hold 600 youngsters actually to accommodate 800. The plan is still in its preplanning phase, however, with implementation of any plan which might win board approval still a year away.

Supt. David Brown has predicted that if the district does not do something to alleviate crowding in the next year, the start of the 1978-79 school year will see some classes on double session.

In addition to the career planning program, Walnut will continue its K through 12 reading program in the fall designed to see that each student is reading at his or her grade level.

The district also plans to move into its new Del Paso Continuation High School, the converted Walnut Elementary School, next year as the new campus of the Walnut School opens for its first full year of school activity. The campus actually opened last April.

Planning on the acquisition of new elementary school sites and the development of the Diamond Bar High School will also occupy the district's attention this year.

The district will operate on an $11.8 million budget this year approved by trustees James Hannan, a building supply salesman; Frank Morales, a data processing engineer; T. Ladd Hollist, a university professor; Richard Vind, a petroleum company executive and Robert Kuhnert, a deputy district attorney for Los Angeles County.

SPREADING OAK — The lovely 100-year-old oak tree adorning the campus of La Verne Heights Elementary School in La Verne will be a welcome sight to students returning to the oldest school in the Bonita school district Sept. 12. The tree, located on land deeded by easement to the State Department of Highways because it adjoins Base Line Road, a state thoroughfare, is cared for by the City of La Verne through a contract with the state.

Claremont graduate school set Sept. 9

Like all the Claremont Colleges, Claremont Graduate School begins classes this fall two weeks ahead of the usual schedule.

The colleges are conducting a three-year experiment with what they call an "early-in, early-out" calendar. Graduate school registration day is Sept. 9, and classes begin the following Monday morning.

The graduate school anticipates enrollment this fall of about 1,500, which was the approximate average in the 1976-77 academic year.

For the colleges as a group, the biggest event of the fall will be the reopening of Bridges Auditorium. The 2,500-seat concert hall has been dark for two years during which a $1.5 million campaign to restore it was mounted successfully. Most of the repairs have been completed and new equipment is in place. Bridges will reopen the night of Oct. 22 with a program in which soprano Shirley Verrett will sing with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. Zubin Mehta will conduct.

Another change affecting the Claremont campuses is the closing of Mills Avenue, which split one campus and separated another from colleges west of it. Mills is now blocked from 12th Street to a point just north of 6th Street. Eventually the closed portions are to be landscaped. Claremont Boulevard east of Mills joins Mills in the south part of the city and carries through traffic to Foothill Boulevard.

NEW AND IMPROVED — The improved facilities at Claremont's San Antonio High School are surveyed by school principal Rudy Crew. The district will begin a commitment to SAHS this year to upgrade the school's physical plant and increase school supplies.

Junk food creates a storm of controversy

So-called "junk food" has created a storm of protest this year in valley school districts which sell the snack items.

As defined by parents protesting the sale in schools, "junk food" includes candy bars, sugared gum, soft drinks, cupcakes and pastries plus potato chips and pretzels.

The issue created heated debate in Claremont, where parents asked the school board not to renew a vending machine contract. The board responded to some degree in banning candy from machines at Claremont High School, but students indicated this would increase sales at the student store.

Soft drinks were removed from machines at the intermediate schools by the Claremont board.

School boards in Pomona and Chino also raised the "junk food" issue. The Chino board requested a report from administrators but hardly discussed the issue after the report was made available.

Pomona school board President Don Donnelly voiced concern over the issue at a recent meeting, also asking administrators to prepare a report on "junk food." He defined the snacks as "food with high caloric content and low nutritional value."

Those fighting so-called "junk food" hope to see passage of a bill in the state Legislature that would ban most sales from elementary and junior high schools.

Assemblyman Art Torres, D-56th Dist., Los Angeles, is the sponsor of a bill which is expected to be voted on soon. Torres, a self-described former "junk food addict," quotes studies which show the snack items not only are bad for children but make them less intelligent and more violent.

Valley school officials would dispute Torres' comments but some have suffered "pangs of conscience" over the sales of "junk food."

Welcoming 260 new students

Fall orientation activities slated at Pitzer College

Pitzer College will welcome 260 new students and their parents Sept. 6, when freshmen and transfer students arrive on campus for fall orientation activities.

New to the administrative staff this year is Patsy H. Sampson, dean of faculty. Former head of the psychology program at the Laboratory of Alcohol Research in Washington, D.C., she succeeds Albert Schwartz, who in addition to resuming his teaching duties in the social sciences at Pitzer will serve as acting director of student services.

Many new educational and cultural opportunities will be available to Pitzer students this fall, said Robert H. Atwell, president.

Pitzer and the Claremont Graduate School, will offer a combined bachelor of arts, master of business administration program, allowing qualified students to begin graduate studies in their senior year.

In addition, the National Association of Banking Women's Bachelor of Arts degree program will begin this year with an on-campus management session scheduled for January, 1978.

The International Student Advisers of Japan, Inc. will send a selected group of 17 Japanese students to Pitzer this fall to study English as a second language. Living in campus dormitories, the students will share facilities with American roommates.

An anticipated event is the moving of the historic Zetterberg House from its present Claremont location to the Pitzer campus where it will be restored and used as a student center.

Other events being planned for the Pitzer community include fall and spring academic convocations and an on-campus reunion next spring of the Charter Classes (1966-68).

Although a pound of tea leaves has more than twice as much caffeine as a pound of coffee beans, a cup of coffee generally has more of the alkalaid than a cup of tea.

Toronto

Toronto, capital of Ontario and Canada's second largest city, was founded in 1793 on the site of a French fort on Lake Ontario. Originally called York, it was the capital of the British colony of Upper Canada. Incorporated as a city in 1834, it was renamed Toronto after an Indian word for a meeting place.

His oil paintings include landscapes, seascapes and florals. He has been a member of the Mid-Valley Art League for three years and has recently become a member of the East Valley Art Association of West Covina.

All areas of California are now open to new distributors. This is a business that can be a full time or part time enterprise.
These products are sold from beautiful coin operated vending equipment.
Our company places the equipment and products in all types of locations, then you take over and re-stock the products twice a week and collect the money from the machines.
And necessary training is provided by us, you do not need previous experience.
The profit potential in this business is high and it's a steady income producer year in and year out. Nearly everyone enjoys cold drinks, don't you?
The cash investment to get started is very reasonable as indicated below and if you expand the business, once you get started, we will approve you for automatic company financing.

AMERICAN HONDA MOTOR CO., INC.
P.O. Box 50, Gardena, Calif. 90247
Auto Sales Division

JUNE 21, 1977

JUNE 21, 1977
TO: ALL HONDA AUTOMOBILE DEALERS
Gentlemen:

On May 3, 1977, we sent you a new price schedule reflecting an average price increase of 2.2% or $80.00 per car. The increase was effective on all cars invoiced on and after May 9, 1977.

Due to continued fluctuation in the exchange rate between the dollar and the yen, it is necessary that our prices be increased once again. The increase will average 4.0% or $148.00 per car.

The revised price schedule is attached and will become effective on all cars invoiced on and after July 15, 1977.

Sincerely,
AMERICAN HONDA MOTOR CO., INC.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — When teaching my little sister which was her left hand and which was the right, I discovered that when the left hand is held straight with the thumb out it is shaped like an "L" for left. — POLLY K.

© 1977 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY — After using that sheetlike fabric softener in the dryer I put the used sheets in my clothes hamper. The fragrance left in several sheets cuts down on the odor from soiled clothes. Also it is less expensive to use a used sheet in lingerie drawers along with a packet of sachet. — PATRICIA.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — Here's how I remove stains from T shirts, white socks and so on so they look like new: In one gallon of hot water in a plastic or enamel container (never aluminum), put 1 cup of electric dishwasher powder and ¼ cup of bleach. Stir and dissolve, always using a wooden spoon. Put garments in and let soak about 30 minutes, but do not stir. Wash as usual and add vinegar to rinse water to remove bleach odor. When doing nylon garments, let mixture cool before putting them in. When solution becomes discolored, remove and start over. This works beautifully for me. — MRS. H.J.M.

DEAR POLLY — I save the wrappers from large loaves of bread and then use them to roll all kinds of pastry on. This allows plenty of room without getting flour on th e counter top, and the mess is easily cleaned up. — MRS. L.H.

DEAR POLLY — Before going grocery shopping I always write my list on the outside of an envelope. I then put any food-saving coupons inside the envelope so I can check to see if I have a coupon for any particular item without digging through my purse. — SHARON.

DEAR POLLY — So as to cut the cooking time for scalloped potatoes about in half, I cut up the potatoes and boil them on top of the stove for about 15 minutes before puting them in the casserole. — BESSIE.

DEAR POLLY — My daughter and I make planters by cutting off the tops of gallon milk jugs or plastic ice cream buckets to the desired heights. These are used for starting plant rootings and seedlings. Using the planters and pretty nylon baling twine, we make modified macrame all-weather planters. — ONA MAE.

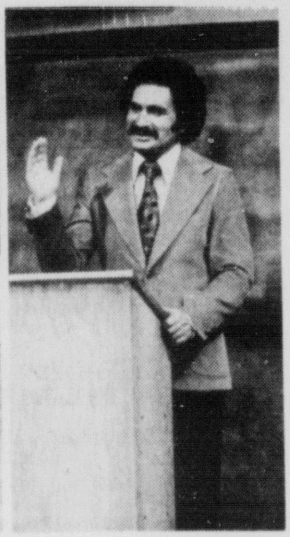
ADVENTURES GALORE

What's going to happen to the stars of ABC's regular series next fall? Funny things, mind-boggling things, exciting things. Fred Silverman, President of ABC Entertainment, and James E. Duffy, President of the ABC Television Network, revealed some of the plans to the ABC affiliated stations recently. (The entire 1977-78 lineup of new and returning shows will be previewed in a special one-hour program, "The Magic of ABC," Wednesday (September 7) at 8PM. Here are some of the adventures that will befall your favorite ABC stars in the fall of 1977:

- Julie, wife of Gabe Kotter of Welcome Back Kotter, will give birth to twins. The big day: Thursday (September 22) at 8PM. The two-part, 90-minute happy event will be preceded by a three-part encore program recalling Julie's days of pregnancy.
- The cast of Happy Days is off to—would you believe?—Hollywood. In "Fonzie in Hollywood," the two-part season premiere on Tuesday (September 20), The Fonz treks west to become a movie star, with "Lights! Cameras! Action!" and lots of surprises.
- The Hardy Boys/Nancy Drew will greet the new season in spooky style with a visit to Transylvania, that eerie place in the Carpathian Mountains where things go bump in the night. There they will encounter every movie and TV monster you ever shivered at. The first part of this two-part premiere is set for Sunday (September 11) at 7PM.
- Donny & Marie will return on Fridays at 8PM with a new, sophisticated look in the season premiere, September 23. Marie, who will be a grownup 18 in October, will show off her sparkling new wardrobe fashioned by Bob Mackie, Cher's designer. Their first guests of the season: Redd Foxx whose own new comedy-variety hour will be launched on Thursday (September 15) at 10PM and Kris Kristofferson.
- Charlie's Angels, with newcomer Cheryl Ladd joining the beautiful sleuths, find trouble in paradise as they visit Hawaii. This special two-hour premiere, "Angels in Paradise," filmed in the enchanted islands, is scheduled for September 14 at 9PM.



- Barney Miller returns with the first of a two-part premiere devoted to the retirement of the beloved but irascible Fish (Abe Vigoda), Thursday (September 15) at 9PM. But hold your tears, Vigoda eases over to his new series, Fish, which premieres on Saturday (September 24) at 8PM.
- The Six Million Dollar Man returns on Sunday (September 11) at 8PM with the first part of a two-part perilous adventure, "Shark!"
- Family resumes its heart-warming tales on Tuesday (September 13) at 10PM with a particularly poignant episode, "A Love Story for Willie," in which Willie (Gary Frank) becomes involved in a bittersweet romance. This two-part drama has a compelling conclusion.

This is merely a peek at some of the fun and excitement in store for a few of the ABC prime-time regulars. Exciting and hilarious episodes are in production for ABC's other returning series, Laverne & Shirley, Three's Company, Eight Is Enough, Baretta and What's Happening!!

Starland Vocal Band

The Starland Vocal Band, two talented young couples who won two Grammy Awards in 1976, form the core of a six-week, musical-variety summer series, The Starland Vocal Band Show, airing Sunday at 8:30PM on CBS.

The group, made up of Bill and Taffy Danoff, Margot Chapman and Jon Carroll, won their Grammys for Danoff's "Afternoon Delight"—one for best new artists and the other for best vocal arrangement. Danoff has also written such songs as "California Day" and "Liberated Woman," and, with John Denver, the Danoffs wrote Denver's hit, "Take Me Home, Country Roads." The Starland Vocal Band tours with Denver, and they have appeared on his television specials.

The Starland Vocal Band Show presents the foursome on location against logical backgrounds for their music and comedy—in concert, on city streets, and at landmarks in their hometown, Washington, D.C.

Each member of the group can sing lead and background with a wide range of individual sound that has touches of country, folk, and rhythm and blues. Together, they possess a remarkable four-part harmony. Bill and Taffy Danoff play piano, and Carroll plays piano and guitar. Miss Chapman, an original member of Fat City, also plays piano.

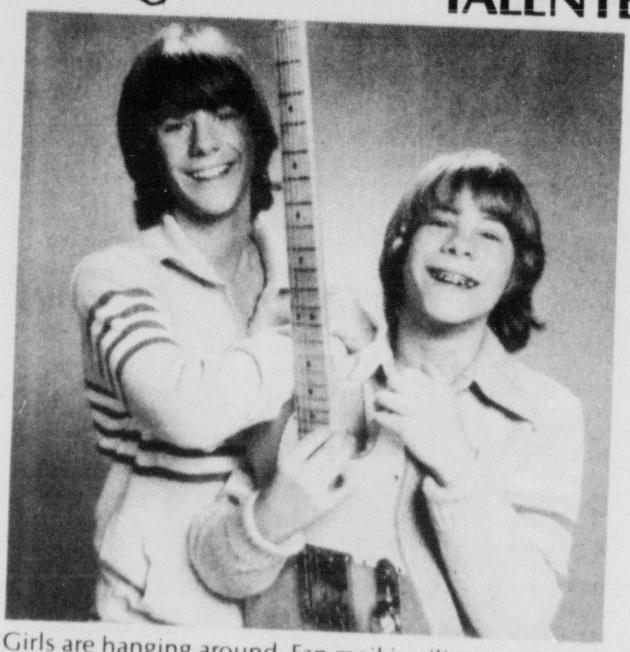
COVER CLOSE-UP

TALENTED DUO



Girls are hanging around. Fan mail is piling up. People are asking for autographs and then you're signing to host your own nighttime network variety show. That's what happens when you begin to make it in the music business, but what makes it unique for the Keane Brothers is their ages. Tom is 13 and John is 12.

These two talented youngsters who have caught the attention and imagination of both the musical world and their ever-increasing fans, host their own half-hour musical variety series, The Keane Brothers Show, premiering Friday at 8PM on CBS for four consecutive weeks.

Already the pair has appeared on numerous national television shows and have had two singles and one album in release. But music isn't a sudden thing to Tom and John. In fact, they've grown up around music. Their father, Bob Keane, is a Los Angeles based record producer. When Tom was three and John was two, they memorized a song their dad brought home, and that started things for the young brothers.

Now Tom plays five instruments and writes songs, John plays three instruments, and they both sing. "I started singing at about age two or three," Tom recalls, "but I didn't really get heavy into music until I was four. I began originally as a drummer but my dad got kind of angry because I would let all the neighborhood kids come in and bang around on them, so he finally took them away. So I was forced into taking it all out on the piano, which is what got me into songwriting."

His brother, however, really got a late start. He was already nine before he began developing any real musical interest and/or aspirations. "I just sort of joined him," John explains. "I just came into the act with him and started playing the drums as a sort of accompaniment. First I was into the guitar but now my main interest is the drums."

But despite their musical involvement—at least four hours of rehearsal a day at home—Tom and John have maintained being normal, average kids. As soon as rehearsal is over, it's over to a friend's for some girl talk, basketball or skateboarding.

"We have a tutor now so it's made it much easier on us," notes Tom. "We have school and practice time every day, but there is also time for us to goof off, watch TV or be with our friends."

By the time Tom entered grammar school "music started becoming the major part of my life," going into high gear about a year ago when their father had a recording studio installed in their home. To both boys, "It was a fantasy come true."

"Elton John was my first inspiration for writing songs," says Tom. "I really liked his style but then we got heavy into Stevie Wonder. I would never just go and copy somebody but Stevie Wonder's incredible use of rhythms has been a strong influence on my music."

Tom's songwriting ability is evidenced on the Keane's album with all of the songs composed by him except for "Sherry," the first single off the L.P. Included on the album is their current single release, "Amy (Show the World You're There)," the youths' tribute to President Carter's daughter.

The melodies and lyrics are sophisticated enough for a cover by Sarah Vaughan and both boys have nothing but respect and compliments for their producer, David Foster.

One of the things that bothers the boys most about their music is that they have to be careful about the subject matter their songs deal with because of their age.

"People tend to put us in a narrow category because we are children," John says, "and mainly, we would like to aim our music toward a much wider, older group. That's not to say we don't want the bubblegum audience to like our music, because we don't want to shut anybody out—we just want to let more people in and then be appreciated on a much more sophisticated level."

Karen Valentine and Roz Kelly have been cast in guest starring roles as Starsky & Hutch resumes production for the Fall season on ABC. Karen is cast as a nurse whose romantic interlude with David Soul turns into a nightmare for him when her possessive nature turns to psychopathic revenge. Roz Kelly (remembered as Pinky Tuscadero in Happy Days) portrays an officer who hits the streets undercover to get to the head of a narcotics ring.

Veteran actor Neville Brand, Michael Strong, Lisa Richards, Laurette Spang,and Timothy Scott have been signed as guest stars in "The Siren" episode of Man From Atlantis. Brand plays a modern day pirate with his own nuclear submarine who discovers a siren (mermaid) and coerces her into a kidnap scheme. Strong, as a top level security adviser, is the victim, Spang is his daughter. Richards and Scott essay the roles of a science officer and a doctor, respectively, who assist Man From Atlantis, Patrick Duffy, in frustrating Brand's villainous plans.

"Dandy Don" Meredith, whose natural wit and sometimes acerbic interchanges with color commentator Howard Cosell helped make ABC's Monday Night Football an immediate hit, returns to ABC to join Cosell and Frank Gifford for the 1977 Monday Night Football season. Fred Silverman, President of ABC Entertainment, said that Meredith would star in a number of made-for-television movies for ABC at thee rate of two a year.

Meredith, the only expert commentator in any sport to win the Emmy Award, has signed a multi-year contract with ABC, that will include exclusive appearances on ABC Sports programs as well as appearances on ABC's Entertainment programming.

Alex Karras, who has been a commentator on ABC's Monday Night Football since 1974, has decided to devote full time to an acting career.

Though a knowledgeable and articulate expert commentator for ABC from 1970 through 1973, Meredith, a former Dallas Cowboy quarterback, was best loved for his down-home folksy humor and extraordinarily quick wit. The latter was best exemplified during one of television's most embarrassing moments. The Oakland Raiders were walloping the Houston Oilers late in a particularly dull game, October 9, 1972, at the Houston Astrodome. A fan bearing a remarkable resemblance to Archie Bunker apparently asleep in the stands, woke up to notice a camera panning the near empty stadium and slowly and deliberately made an obscene gesture for all America to behold. Without losing a beat, Meredith uttered his now-famous caption, "Now there's a Houston fan who still thinks his team's number 1."

Since 1974, Meredith has been a color commentator for NBC's coverage of NFL Football and a sometimes actor for that network.

A two-time All-American at Southern Methodist University, Meredith came to the then newly-formed Dallas Cowboys in 1960. By 1966 he had led his team to the NFL Championship Game, only to lose to the great Green Bay Packers in the final moments. In the final second in the 1967 Championship Game, the Packers again nosed out Meredith's Cowboys. Feeling he was losing his competitive edge, Meredith retired while still in his prime immediately after the 1968 season—a season in which he ranked as the National Football League's second best passer.

One of the most courageous athletes ever to play the game, Meredith suffered numerous ailments during his career—a shoulder separation, pneumonia, stomach disorders and nose, ribcage, knee, ankle, and arm injuries. Still, he was able to complete better than 50 percent of his passes, 1,170 of 2,308 attempts for 17,199 yards and 135 touchdowns.

At SMU, he set an NCAA record for career accuracy by hitting 61 percent of his passes from 1957 to 1959 for 3,130 yards and 25 touchdowns.

A native of Mount Vernon, Texas, Meredith currently lives in Los Angeles, California with his wife, Susan.

I want low tar plus real taste. The savings are a bonus.

To me, smoking a low tar cigarette with no taste makes no sense. Winston Lights and new Winston Light 100's have low numbers with real Winston taste. That's what I smoke for. And, without Winston taste, savings mean nothing.

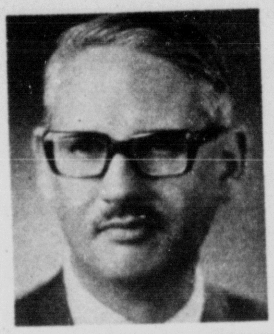
ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.



FOR LYNN A. GREENWALT, director, Fish and Wildlife Services, Department of the Interior

How did the bald eagle become our symbol? —O.N.D., Las Cruces, N.M.

● The credit goes to John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and Ben Franklin for selecting a distinctly American species of wildlife. Although Franklin later said he preferred the wild turkey, the bald eagle — adopted as our national emblem in 1782 — was a refreshing change from the lions, crowns, shields, spears and battle axes symbolizing other nations of the time.

FOR DIANE VON FURSTENBERG, designer

Why do you encourage women to wear dresses more often than slacks? —Mrs. G.G. Crabtree, Lansing, Mich.

● When a woman wears a dress, she walks differently, sits differently and acts differently — more like a woman, which is something all designers like to see. Also, a pretty dress can be put on in the morning, worn right through to the evening and will look nice all day long.

FOR JEAN STAPLETON, star of All in the Family

What part of the day do you like best of all? —J.H.C., New Milford, Conn.

● It's a tie between breakfast and dinner. At breakfast, my husband Bill and I can sit down and have a good talk after the children [Pam and John] have gone to school. It's quiet and relaxing. Then, at dinner, the four of us are together, and we mull over the events of the day.

FOR ROBERT REDFORD, starring in A Bridge Too Far

Is it true that the great deal of time you spent playing sports when you were young made you hate reading? —H.M., Olympia, Wash.

● No. I actually read a lot as a kid, but I wouldn't dare admit it. I was deep into athletics, and you just don't read if you're an athlete. I was really a "sneak" reader — you didn't read Edgar Allan Poe if you were on the baseball or football team.

FOR BILLY JOEL, singer and composer

I can't get my son (a big fan of yours) away from the TV. He says you got started in show business by watching and copying. True? —A.H., Green Bay, Wis.

● No. We didn't have television when I was growing up. Well, we had a set, but when it broke we had no money to fix it — so it stayed broken. I did what most kids did in the days before the tube — read a lot.

FOR CHARO, entertainer

Do you mind when people call you slow? —C.A., Ashland, Ohio

● It doesn't bother me if I'm called dumb, but I resent being referred to as slow. You should see how quickly I learned the way to the bank.

FOR JESSICA LANGE, star of King Kong

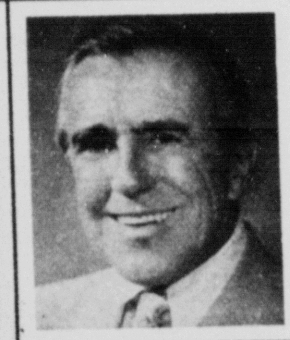
Is it a blow to your ego that the movie is not doing well at the box office? —T.J., Ventura, Calif.

● No, because the film has done extremely well. Paramount expected too much; if they wanted another Jaws, they should have made a shark the star, not a gorilla. It may be that American box-office results didn't come up to all those astronomical expectations, but around the world, the movie has set box-office records.



FOR DR. WILLIAM E. HOMAN, pediatrician and author of Child Sense

At what age should a child be taught how to swim? —L.O., Troy, N.Y.

● Certainly not before he can walk. The dangers of a toddler getting in the water before the age of 3 are too numerous and complex to go into here. What parent would let a child play in the path of oncoming traffic? Yet the perils of a pool are worse. At 3, the minimum age, a child should be watched all the time, even in shallow water, and wear a flotation jacket when he's close to or in the water.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I saw young Andrea McArdle on the recent TV broadcast of the Tony Awards and am curious about her background. —H.D., Rye, N.Y.

● At 13, she has an impressive résumé. A three-year stint on the soap, Search for Tomorrow, won her daytime TV's Best Juvenile Actress Award for 1976. She has also performed at dinner theaters and has made many TV pilots and over 30 commercials. Right now, she's the toast of Broadway in the Tony Award-winning musical, Annie.

FOR W. MICHAEL BLUMENTHAL, Secretary of the Treasury

When you dine out, do you pay with cash, check or credit card? —L.J., Alexandria, Va.

● All three, but now that I'm Secretary of the Treasury, and after years of having to produce identification when attempting to cash checks (not always successfully) or use credit cards, I find it exhilarating and reassuring to have accepted by even the most cautious strangers a piece of paper with my signature on it as liquidation of any and all financial obligation, large or small, in city or hamlet, here or abroad, McDonald's or the Ritz.

PRO AND CON

Should The Arts Receive More Federal And State Support?

PRO Amyas Ames, chairman, Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts and Concerned Citizens for the Arts

Yes. Government aid to the arts, far from being a "hand out," is a payment for service rendered. Millions of people coming to museums or to special performances bring life, security and pleasure to communities and increase the economic activity and employment, a service worth many times the aid coming to arts institutions. If we fail to maintain health in the arts, if government fails to help the arts institutions for public service rendered, art activity in our cities will sink into mediocrity. The tourist industry, which depends heavily on the arts, will decrease — stores, garages, hotels, restaurants, the economic basis of cities, will be affected. This we cannot afford.

CON Donald Lambro, author of The Federal Rathole

No. The arts should look elsewhere for financial support. With a $65 billion deficit hitting Washington in the coming fiscal year, how can we argue that aid should be given to the arts? We don't have enough funds to provide minimum health-care support for our neediest. We can't support every cause, no matter how worthy. Hundreds of millions of dollars are given each year to the arts by businesses, foundations and philanthropists. Rather than Federal aid, I'd like to see more generous tax breaks to generate more support for the arts from the private sector, particularly to assist our museums, orchestras and legitimate theaters.

. . . the U.S. Government Awards The Ram-Jet Supercharger Patent No. 3118435. And other patents pending.

The Ram-Jet Supercharger is a great new weapon in America's war on high fuel costs — and the sluggish performance you get because of government mandated pollution control devices. It combines the best of automotive and aviation air induction principles. (Yet it's so brilliantly simple to install, any 12 year old can do it in a few minutes) . . . So do not confuse the RAM-JET with all the many auto-gimmicks you see advertised that have no patent and serve no real purpose.

NOW! New Ram-Jet Supercharger TURNS POLLUTION INTO FREE POWER FOR YOUR CAR.

1) Ram-Jet air intake vent.
2) Waste gas from pollution control line enters here.
3) "Mini Computer" valve inside improves gas/air mixture for more clean power, and better economy.
4) "Jet Stream" of super vaporized mix improves carburetion — actually results in FREE power!! Adds as much as 15% more clean power (And it does so with absolute 100% safety).

Easy instructions show you how to install in just a few minutes. No special tools. No training needed. Fits all cars and trucks.

(Can give you up to 50 extra miles for every tankfull)*

The Ram-Jet is virtually indestructible — made of a fantastic DuPont space-age material. It never needs replacing. Is guaranteed for at least 100,000 miles.

New Ram-Jet Actually "Jet Assists" Your Car Engine . . . Makes It Burn Up To 15 Gallons Of Air For Every Gallon Of Gas . . . And Gives You As Much As 15% More Clean Power! Jet Like Acceleration!

We believe Ram-Jet is the most exciting piece of high-performance automotive equipment since the V-8. Yet it weighs only a few ounces. Installs in a couple of minutes (No special tools or training needed. You won't even get your hands greasy). Costs less than a tankful of gas. And saves you so much gas, it's like getting up to one gallon in every ten FREE!

The brainchild of Ed Almquist, internationally famous automotive engineer and the "Thomas Edison of high-performance accessories" . . . The Ram-Jet took over 20 years to develop and perfect. And now — only after proving itself beyond a shadow of a doubt — at Pocono and other stock car races, as well as in a national test of thousands of ordinary cars in normal driving situations . . . NOW, AT LAST, THE RAM-JET IS READY FOR YOU!
READY TO TURN POLLUTION INTO FREE POWER!

How does it work?

Just as a jet engine requires a certain supply of air to operate . . . so does the gasoline combustion engine in your car. And it's the carburetor that mixes this air with fuel to fire the cylinders and make your car go. The problem is that carburetors were invented over 50 years ago when gas was plentiful and cheap and air pollution wasn't even talked about. The carburetor hasn't changed much since then: it's still a big compromise! It only works perfectly on those rare occasions when all driving conditions are perfect. (Which averages only a couple of minutes at the most out every driving hour). Your carburetor just can not efficiently adjust itself to your stop-and-go driving, sudden bursts of speed; or to put it in technical terms . . . those many occasions when your engine is operating under 0-10" high-load conditions. When this crucial mixture of air and gas is not right on the money, the result is a loss of power with a lot more gas being burned than is really necessary!

NOW WITH GOVERNMENT INSISTENCE ON POLLUTION CONTROL DEVICES, THE WASTE IN POWER AND GASOLINE IS EVEN GREATER THAN EVER. BECAUSE THE BLOW-BY POLLUTION THAT USED TO BE RELEASED INTO THE AIR IS NOW FED BACK INTO YOUR ENGINE.

If you've ever wondered why the newer cars seem to have even less power than the older ones, well now you know. Today, you can pay as much as $10,000 or $20,000 (or even more) for a new car and still find it lacks real oomph when you need it, hesitating and even stalling out on you frequently.

Now, at last, the Ram-Jet to the rescue! It solves both problems at once.

It brings your 50-year-old-carburetor design into the Jet Age.

1) It works like a "mini-computer" to automatically adjust the air/gas mixture to your every driving need. It thus steps up gas molecularization . . . reducing the over-rich mixture before it becomes wasteful. Just as a jet engine sucks air into it . . . the Ram-Jet automatically and safely jets air into the gas mixture the very split second your driving conditions require it.

2) It captures the polluted air that would ordinarily be fed back into your engine . . . and re-energizes it into a "Jet Stream" that is once again ignited into useful clean power instead of clogging up your engine and making it hesitate and stall and waste gasoline and power.

GREATEST GUARANTEE IN AUTOMOTIVE HISTORY: THE 100,000 MILE 100% MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. Anytime within the next 100,000 miles you put on your car, if you don't think the Ram-Jet Supercharger is the best automotive investment you've ever made, simply return it to us for a full money back refund. No questions asked. (And don't forget — with the Ram-Jet turning pollution into free power instead of turning it back into your engine, it's no telling how many extra power-packed miles you'll be able to log on your engine before its ready for the junk heap).

THOUSANDS OF SIMILAR DEVICES SOLD IN EUROPE FOR MORE THAN $20 A PIECE. THE RAM-JET SUPERCHARGER IS NOW AVAILABLE TO YOU FOR JUST $12.95. BECAUSE OF A SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT, IT COMES TO YOU DIRECT (NO MIDDLEMEN) FROM THE INVENTOR / MANUFACTURER HIMSELF, MR. ED ALMQUIST.

WHAT DO PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE RAM-JET SUPERCHARGER? WE GET LETTERS LIKE THESE EVERY DAY.

An airline pilot writes: "Suddenly my little six cylinder engine seems to have the power of an eight. Yet it saves gas like it was a four. That little Ram-Jet is amazing!" — Phillip Shade, Plymouth, Connecticut

"I have a Ram-Jet. And so do many of my parishioners. We found out that we average from 2 to 6 more miles per gallon with much more engine pep and acceleration."— The Rev. P. Mick Harvey, Illinois

"Your MINI-SUPERCHARGER sure works for me! I drive a Rambler with 100,260 miles on it and the best mileage I could ever get was 19 M.P.G. Now, after installing your MINI-SUPERCHARGER I get 25 M.P.G. from it as well as peppier performance."—Sincerely, W.R.

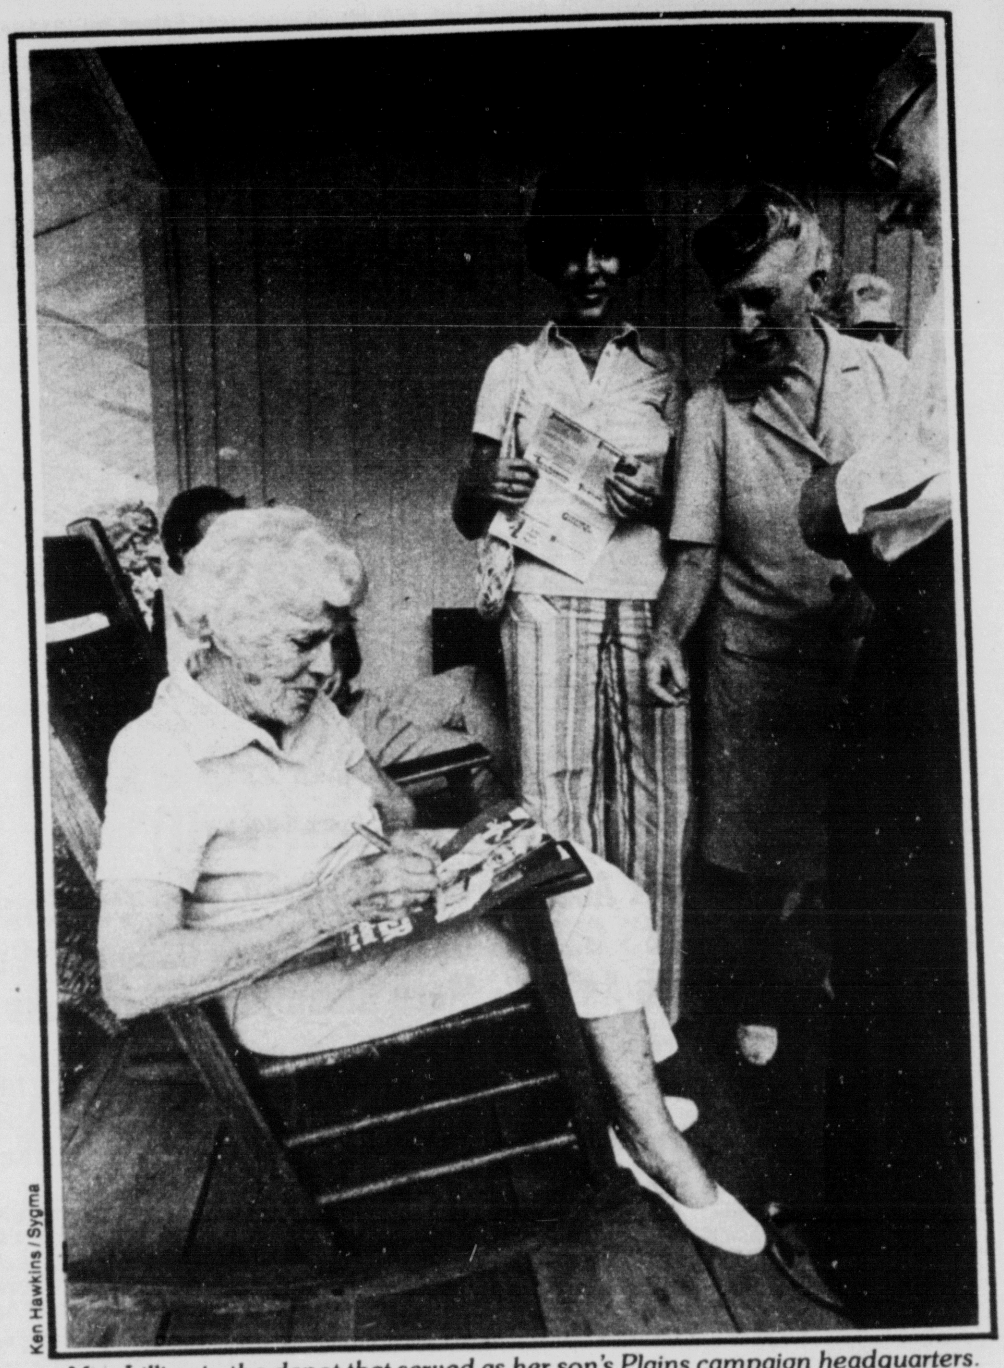
AN INTIMATE LOOK AT PLAINS, GA.

Sygma

Cousin Hugh Carter still has his antique store, brother Billy still has his filling station and the mayor is still the barber...but most everything else is changing fast.



Ken Hawkins / Sygma

Miss Lillian in the depot that served as her son's Plains campaign headquarters.

By Frances Spatz Leighton

The Carter family has gone underground. Or, as some of the town folks say down in Plains, "The Carters have taken to the hills." Only cousin Hugh still has a listed number; Miss Lillian ignores her town house, spending most of her time, when she isn't residing at the White House or traveling the world, hiding away at her little pond house; President Jimmy's sisters, Gloria and Ruth, are seldom seen in town; even brother Billy has gotten himself a place 19 miles outside of Plains. "I couldn't take the traffic," he told friends. "Why it's gotten so a dog can't take a nap out in the street anymore. And a man can't drink his beer in peace and quiet."

It's all too true. A dog used to be safe sleeping in the middle of the road for two, three hours at a stretch before a car rolled into town and rudely woke him up with a honk. And Billy Carter used to be safe from autograph seekers, even if he chose to spend the day relaxing in front of his gas station with his buddies, beer cans in hand, exchanging jokes. Now tourists pay $1 for a beer can that someone will say was emptied by the President's brother.

Still, Plains is valiantly trying to resist change. As its citizens say, "We promised Jimmy we wouldn't change, and we are trying to hold the line. He used to walk hand in hand with Rosalynn, and we want him, when all this is over, to come home and do the same thing as always."

To this end, citizens have taken strong measures to keep the growth pattern away from their town. But they have had to bow to progress, too, and sadly put in a police station with four policemen as well as a traffic light and two pay telephones on Main Street. An average weekday brings 2,000 to 3,000 camera-carrying strangers into town to gawk and snap; on weekends the number goes up to 6,000.

Asked how many come into his store, Hugh Carter's Antiques, the first cousin of the President says, "About half." That makes an awful lot of people taking pictures of him and asking for autographs. In self-defense, cousin Hugh has had to cut the number of autograph hounds by putting up a sign, "Books $1. Will be autographed."

The tourists find Hugh Carter wherever he is in the store and hand him books to autograph. "Hi. Glad to see you," he says jovially. "I'm the President's first cousin. Glad to have you in Plains. Welcome." Some handshaking follows.

A young woman lags behind shyly until the others have left. "I didn't have money to buy a book, but would you mind autographing this postcard of Jimmy Carter? I paid a quarter."

"Autograph's my middle name," he booms at her. "Give it here. Happy to." She walks away, clutching the card in one hand and happily surveying the hand that the man with the magic name has shaken.

That's one of the bows to progress in Plains — the souvenirs that almost every store along Main Street has added to whatever it specialized in before — and the money rolls in for such popular items as a bottle opener that has a likeness to Jimmy Carter's teeth as the working part.

But the town's efforts to preserve the rustic quality that President Jimmy knew and loved involve the expenditure of considerable money. For example, a 17- acre Visitors Welcome Center a little distance from town cost Georgia $174,000, which was matched in Federal funds. There will be a vast parking lot where tourists can stop and rest and take a bus the half-mile to town. This way, the 683 souls who inhabit Plains will not be so overwhelmed by the crush of traffic. The town also is putting in a roadside park and "permanent" rest rooms, sorely needed, at a cost of $70,000.

"I think we can manage somehow to do the impossible and maintain the quality of our town," says Hugh. "At least we're trying." The mayor, for example, is still the barber, and so far the city fathers have not permitted taxi companies to be formed. But they have bowed to the demand for transportation and have granted five permits to operate tour mini-buses to take the crowds up and down the streets of Plains. Guides point out Miss Lillian's house, the street where Jimmy Carter's house is (the street is now cordoned off so that not even the house's chimney can be seen) and the house where brother Billy is hiding out until his new house is finished. That old house is so near the Baptist church where Jimmy taught Sunday school that tourists during the campaign — and even now — would come knocking on Billy's door before the church doors opened. "They didn't even give me time to have my first beer and my eggs," he says.

The tour bus also points out Billy's gas station where he used to sit with his beer can but now comes to only occasionally. The atmosphere at the station has not changed, and a row of men still sit, beer cans in hand, dressed in cowboy boots and various headgear, as if waiting for their leader to appear at any moment.

The townspeople are much amused that female tourists flock around the motley crew of loungers, snapping pictures, asking for Billy and going inside the rundown station to buy souvenir beer. The women of Plains do not hesitate to say they avoid walking by Billy's station because of the jokes and comments. "I wouldn't go there for anything," said one pretty woman with a Georgia accent.

Still, Billy is the most talked about man in town. "He has gone commercial," the townspeople say. "He has an agent now — a company from Nashville — that won't let him appear without money — a thousand dollars just to show up. And we hear tell a beer company wants to put Billy decals on the bottoms of all their cans." The Plains people chuckle about that and estimate it will take a million dollars to get his permission.

Billy's defenders point out that at least he is not selling souvenirs at his filling station. But he has finally signed a contract permitting his famous face to appear on peanut products that will be gift-wrapped and sold under the company name of Plain Ole Food Co., with the legend on each box saying, "Billy Carter's Original Peanut Gift Box from Plains."

Barto's Barbecue, just outside Plains, is a favorite of visitors and natives alike.

Jimmy lets each relative profit from the new family status in his or her own way. The only time he has put his foot down, the natives say, with a chuckle, was when sister Gloria started milking the tourists by selling one-inch squares of land — "Plains peanut land" — for $5.

All the Carters seem to be making money, including cousin Hugh in souvenirs — "We used to hold auctions at the Hugh Carter Auction store but we don't have time anymore," he said — and Lillian and Ruth in books. In fact, Miss Lillian was much annoyed when two journalists beat her to the punch and wrote a book entitled, Miss Lillian and Friends: The Plains, Georgia, Family Philosophy and Recipe Book. Miss Lillian would rather do it herself and now has her own contract with a publisher, while the President's sister Ruth, a faith-healing preacher, is making money on religious books.

As for Hugh, President Jimmy does not seem to mind that mixed in with furniture and antiques, such as a circular stained-glass donkey for $100 and rockers and chamber pots at various prices, is an amazing array of trifling items. The knickknacks and gewgaws serve only to prove you've been to the "City of the President": peanut-shaped whistles, ash trays, serving trays, Jimmy Carter buttons, T-shirts (one showing the President with a pitchfork and a pile of peanuts), pennants, plastic mugs and pencils. Jimmy comes to the store every time he's in Plains and is very close to Hugh.

Also still close to the President is the handsome young pilot, Tom Peterson, who saw him through to victory. Some around town say Jimmy could never have made it, tucked away from the mainstream of American life, as he was, if there had not been the small private airport with its grass landing field owned by Peterson. The Presidential candidate spent many hours waiting for takeoffs in Tom's house beside the airport, and he still returns.

Jimmy is still an unaffected man, carrying sometimes neat, sometimes sloppy packages with him when he returns to the White House from Plains. Lately he was carrying a sloppy package tied with his sweater under his arm. Before boarding his helicopter, which was to take him and his family and entourage to the bigger airport at Albany, where Air Force I awaited him, the President was told that the helicopter was overloaded and that another plane was coming to take the rest of the luggage and people.

Jimmy handed his mysterious package to an Air Force aide and boarded. But as the helicopter started to lift off, the President, to the consternation of the pilot, opened the door and leaped to the ground. Running to the stunned officer, he delivered a message and raced back to the chopper.

Only later did the pilot learn what had been so important. He had told the harassed aide, "If anything happens to my glass donkey in there, I'm going to be very unhappy."

There may be no movies, taxis or motels in Plains, but with fertile imaginations, and such star clowns as Billy, some say it doesn't need other diversions to make the time pass.

Religion is taken very seriously. The forced resignation of the Baptist minister who preached at Jimmy Carter's church has rent the town asunder and given it something to talk about for years. Everyone, Baptist and non-Baptist, has an opinion, and some folks are vociferous. Some say the controversy of whether blacks should be permitted to visit or become members of the church wasn't the only issue. One townsman charged that the minister, Bruce Edwards, "didn't visit members of his congregation who were in hospitals, even a deacon who was in for an extended stay. And he didn't recognize one of his own flock, even though she was a regular. He greeted her as a visitor."

The President, it is said, has tried to stay out of the controversy. On one recent trip to Plains he found an excuse to go to church in another town. Now cousin Hugh has formed a new, splinter church to be called Bottsfield Baptist Mission. Informed of his action, Miss Lillian confessed to being thoroughly confused and declared she would not attend either church until she had a long talk with Jimmy. One hopes that serenity returns to the church scene before Jimmy's term in office expires.

The town is fiercely proud to claim a President as its own, but residents are worried that everything seems to be driving him further away — the church business, the Secret Service that surrounds him and even some Secret Service complaints about the safety of the local airport.

But one thing that hasn't changed — and probably never will — is Turner's Hardware Store, the only store on Main Street that does not sell souvenirs. Trying to keep the town of Plains as Jimmy remembers it, Turner's proclaims in a hand-lettered sign outside, "We have not changed since 1902." The store doesn't sell souvenirs — it gives them away, and a sign says, "Help yourself." The gift is a tiny booklet containing a Biblical quotation. On the cover is a cheerful Smile button image and the slogan: "Smile. Jesus loves you."

It's Inside You . . .

Can You Wake Up That Financial Genius?

" . . . More Than 100,000 People Have Discovered How To Really Do It . . ."

Mark Haroldsen spent four years perfecting a "wealth formula" and became a millionaire in the process:
"I've found," says Haroldsen, "that most people just need a very specific road map to follow. . . they can do what I've done. Millionaires are not smarter than you, they just know the wealth formula."

THE DIFFERENCE

If hours, efforts, or brains are not what separates the rich from the average guy who is swamped with debts and very little income then what is?

I learned the answer to that question from an old fellow in Denver. This fellow worked in a drug store stocking the shelves. Very few people knew that he had $200,000 in the bank, all of which he had earned starting from nothing.

Within a year after meeting him, I was told and shown the same thing by a young man who had recently earned over a million dollars. By this time, I began to realize that what I was being shown was truly a remarkable and workable way to grow rich.

THE BEGINNING

I began to apply the principles and methods I had been shown. The results were amazing. I couldn't believe how easy it was, in fact it seemed too easy.

But then I met an elderly lady (83 years old) who, although not very smart, has made $117,000 using the same formula.

I then figured my beginning wasn't luck.

For three and one half years, I worked hard to refine and improve on the formula that I had been shown, so that it would be easy to get quicker results.

As I did this, my assets multiplied very rapidly (160% per year) to the point that I didn't have to work any longer.

MORE LEISURE

I guess I am bragging now, but I did start spending a lot of time in our back yard pool, traveling around the country, and doing a lot of loafing.

Then one day a friend asked me how he could do what I had done.

So I began to outline the formula that I had improved to show him really how simple it was, and how he could do the same thing.

I also showed him how to buy a $26,000 property for $75 down.

ANYONE CAN

You can do exactly what I did, or my close friends have done; in fact, you may well do it better. (I began doing this in my spare time only.)

It doesn't matter where you live or the size of your town or city, my formula will show you exactly how to:

- Buy income properties for as little as $100 down.

One of many unsolicited comments on my material:
" . . . when it came I read it. Then I read it again, and have read it about once a week since it came. No magic. No secrets. A plain, easy-to-understand, 1-2-3 way for anybody with a little patience and common sense to become totally independent within a reasonable length of time. The one book I've been looking for for at least fifteen years. . . ."
– Jerry Donaho, Valdez, Arkansas

By the next time he approached me, I had written almost a complete volume on the easy way for him to copy my results.

EASY TO READ

I wrote this in simple, straight forward language so anyone could understand it.

This time my friend's questions were very specific. (He had already begun buying properties with the formulas I had been giving him.) Now he had a property he wanted to buy, but was out of cash. How could he buy it?

I not only showed him how to buy without cash, but by the time the deal was complete, he had $5,000 cash in his pocket to boot.

- Begin without any cash.
- Put $10,000 cash in your pocket each time you buy (without selling property).
- Double your assets every year.
- Legally avoid paying federal or state income taxes.
- Buy bargains at ½ their market value.
- Allow you to travel one week out of every month.

When you send me a check or money order for $10, I will send you all my formulas and methods, and you are free to use them anywhere and as often as you would like.

IT'S GUARANTEED

Now if you were a personal friend of mine, I know you would believe me and not need any kind of guarantee, but since you don't know me personally, I will guarantee that you will be completely satisfied and that my formula will work for you if you apply it. I will back up that guarantee by not cashing your check for 30 days, and if you for any reason change your mind, let me know and I will send your uncashed check back.

You may ask, why am I willing to share my formula for wealth? Well, simply because those of you who order my material will be helping to increase my net worth.

You shouldn't care if I profit as long as you profit. I guarantee that you'll be satisfied that my methods will help you or I'll send your money back!

TO ORDER

Simply take any size paper, write the words "Financial Freedom", and send your name and address, along with a check for $10.00 to Mark O. Haroldsen, Inc., Dept. E-792 , Tudor Mansion Bldg., 4751 Holladay Blvd., Salt Lake City, Utah 84117.

If you send for my material now, I will also send you documents that will show you precisely how you can borrow from $20,000 to $200,000 at 2% above the prime rate using just your signature as collateral.

By the way, if you feel a little uneasy about sending me a check or money order for $10.00, simply postdate it by 30 days which will completely eliminate your risk.

A MYSTERY SOLVED

Tracking Down The Legionnaires' Disease

By Willard Randall

ONE YEAR AGO: The phone rang incessantly in the office of Pennsylvania American Legion adjutant Edward Hoak. Callers were reporting illnesses and deaths of fellow Legionnaires from around the state. By the day's end, Hoak suspected the worst — that a grim epidemic had struck the Legionnaires. The cause was a mystery.

In a few weeks, some 180 Legionnaires and their relatives and friends sank into delirium, 29 of them dying before the fever — and the panic — broke. When it was all over, few people learned how an elite corps of disease detectives from the U.S. Center for Disease Control (CDC), the Scotland Yard of American medicine, fanned out from its base in Atlanta and tracked down the silent killer.

Until CDC was founded during World War II, no central agency existed to control the deadly outbreaks that almost yearly took their toll of lives: yellow fever, tuberculosis, diphtheria, influenza, malaria, rabies, smallpox, measles, typhus, cholera, polio. Once created, the medical superagency hunted down each disease and inoculated whole groups of people, all but eliminating the specter of mass disease from American life. In the 70's CDC was given charge of campaigns to reduce malnutrition and occupational diseases. By then,the Center had grown to a research and investigative force of 3,600.

Typical of how CDC functions is its long-term battle against smallpox. By 1970, the spread of air travel heightened worldwide risk of the disease. In that year, Dr. William H. Foege, a public-health specialist who joined CDC at age 26, led CDC teams to West Africa, a notorious breeding ground of the disease. After three years there, CDC brought the world's highest incidence of smallpox to zero.

Other programs were equally successful. CDC brought polio vaccine to virtually every American in the 50's, and it waged war on tuberculosis with new antibiotics in the mid-60's.

In recent years, with most communicable diseases under control, CDC has focused on finding small outbreaks and stamping them out before they spread. The cases are always urgent, and doctors know they can phone directly to Atlanta. An hour after a call, CDC teams can fly anywhere in the world.

Calling themselves "shoe-leather epidemiologists," CDC specialists wear lapel pins showing a shoe with a hole worn through its sole. The pins symbolize their kinship to police detectives.

In a recent case, a Michigan city reported an outbreak of hepatitis in high-school students. CDC learned the victims had one thing in common: a taste for glazed doughnuts. They traced the outbreak to a local bakery. The man who glazed the doughnuts was suffering from a case of the contagious liver ailment.

Last year, New York City health officials reported an outbreak of typhoid. CDC sleuths zeroed in on a restaurant serving contaminated mashed potatoes. The "epidemic" ended.

Not all cases are solved quickly. In 1970 illness swept into Pontiac, Mich., felling workers in the county health department. When CDC's gumshoes arrived, one after another of them collapsed. Finally, CDC pinpointed the building's air-conditioning system, shut it down and stopped the disease from spreading. But the cause remained unknown. Then last year, the Legionnaires began falling.

Pennsylvania's only staff epidemic specialist was a young veterinarian. He called CDC, which quickly traced the disease to the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, headquarters for the Legion convention that 5,000 members and their families had attended days earlier. Had the victims not been linked by such an obvious event, the epidemic could have gone undetected. CDC quickly dispatched 25 staffers to interview survivors across Pennsylvania and 15 to inspect the hotel. There they checked everything from the ice-cube machines to the laundering practices. They found a hose illegally connecting the hotel's drinking water and air-conditioning systems. When word leaked out, the Bellevue emptied and was forced to close three months later.

Despite the possibility of widespread panic and election-year political pressure for a quick solution, CDC researchers methodically sifted the clues. Slides of tissue from guinea pigs injected with tissue taken from the dead Legionnaires were circulated through CDC's labs and passed routinely across the desk of 36-year-old microbiologist, Dr. Joseph McDade. A specialist in typhus and spotted fever, McDade ruled out these diseases and rickets as causes and went on to other work. But something bothered him. Five months later, during the Christmas holidays, he returned to the case. "I don't know why I was reviewing it," he says, "I just decided to go back over my guinea pig slides."

McDade inoculated his guinea pigs with lung tissue from two victims. In a few days, the animals developed telltale symptoms: lethargy, fever, watery eyes. McDade injected material from their spleens into chick embryos. All died within six days.

Studying the yolk sacs under a microscope, he noticed germs he had never seen. When he mixed them with blood from surviving Legionnaires, he found that in 29 of 33 cases the blood had been immunized against the germs. This indicated the men had been already exposed to the same bacteria and had produced antibodies to fight them. Tests on blood samples saved since the Pontiac outbreaks showed the same antibodies.

The mystery had been solved. McDade had discovered a previously unknown bacterium and proved that it had killed the Legionnaires. As a result, doctors can now immediately recognize the bacterium and can recommend antibiotics to control and treat it.

Despite a reputation for painstaking investigations, CDC prefers not to have such exotic problems. "What we're trying to do is prevent disease," stresses Dr. Philip S. Brachman, CDC director of epidemiology.

After measles cases soared this spring, CDC urged parents to keep immunizations against measles, rubella, diphtheria, whooping cough, typhus and polio up to date. Parents should learn the latest requirements before a new school year begins.

Brachman notes: "We are going to cooperate with the states in emphasizing enforcement. The schools in many states will be sending children home this year until they get the point across that it is everybody's job to wipe out disease."

Willard Randall has contributed to a number of magazines and is the author with Steve Solomon of Building 6, a study of occupational diseases.

PEOPLE QUIZ/ By John E. Gibson

Is there a period during the day when your mind functions most effectively? Is blinking related to thinking?

THE WAYS YOU REVEAL HOW SMART YOU ARE TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Whether your I.Q. increases or decreases with age may depend on your personality.

2. A person's intelligence makes itself known in a variety of ways — general demeanor, manner of speaking, types of responses, for example — and the observant individual can estimate another's intelligence after only a few minutes' acquaintance.

3. Female college students aren't considered as intelligent as male students.

4. Blinking is related to thinking.

5. There is a certain period during the day when your mental faculties function with greatest efficiency.

6. The more words you know, the better you can think.

ANSWERS

1. True. A study conducted by investigators from the University of North Carolina and the Fels Research Institute demonstrated that "People who show I.Q. increases differ in personality from those who show decreases. Preschool children who gain in I.Q. are described as independent and competitive in social contexts. Elementary-grade children who gain in I.Q. are independent, scholastically competitive, self-initiators and problem solvers." I.Q. increases in adulthood tend to go hand in hand with the personality characteristics of the introvert. It was further reported that parents of children who show I.Q. gains provide their children with acceleration and encouragement for intellectual tasks and take a moderate, rationally structured approach to discipline.

2. True. In investigations at Parsons College and at Toronto's Lakeshore Psychiatric Clinic, judges were asked to estimate the I.Q.'s of men and women of various ages and walks of life. In no case were judges allowed more than 15 minutes' contact with the subjects, and in some cases the period was as little as five minutes. After the estimates were made, each person was given standard intelligence tests. Results supported the findings of previous studies showing that "even novice testers predicted intelligence scores with high accuracy."

3. False. In studies of undergraduates at East Tennessee State University, students rated the intelligence, the motivation and the achievement of typical male and female students with class ranks similar to their own. Results: "Both males and females regarded the typical female student as more intelligent, more motivated, more academically successful than the typical male student." Studies in other colleges have yielded similar findings.

4. True. University of California researchers cite findings showing that blinking is an indicator of the thinking and feeling processes and that high rates of blinking are associated with thoughts that are disturbing, exciting or frustrating. Blinking also was found to occur at "psychologically interesting moments." (When the person you're talking to blinks, it's an indication that what you're saying is really registering.) When thoughts are turned inward, however, as in intense concentration on some problem, the rate of blinking was found to be significantly reduced.

5. True. In studies at the Laboratory of Experimental Psychology, University of Sussex (England), subjects were required to perform two types of tasks (involving thinking and reasoning) six different times during the day. Findings: Performance on both tests was found to improve markedly during the period from 8:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M., and then to fall off fairly rapidly.

6. True. Language has been termed "a better vehicle for thought" than anything else, and, for the most part, we think in words. Hence, the more extensive our vocabulary, the better we are able to articulate our thoughts clearly and succinctly to ourselves and to others. As psychologist Rudolf Arnheim observes in his monograph on language, while detached, theoretical thinking (as in mathematics, for example) can function without words, there is no question that language — words — certainly helps thinking.

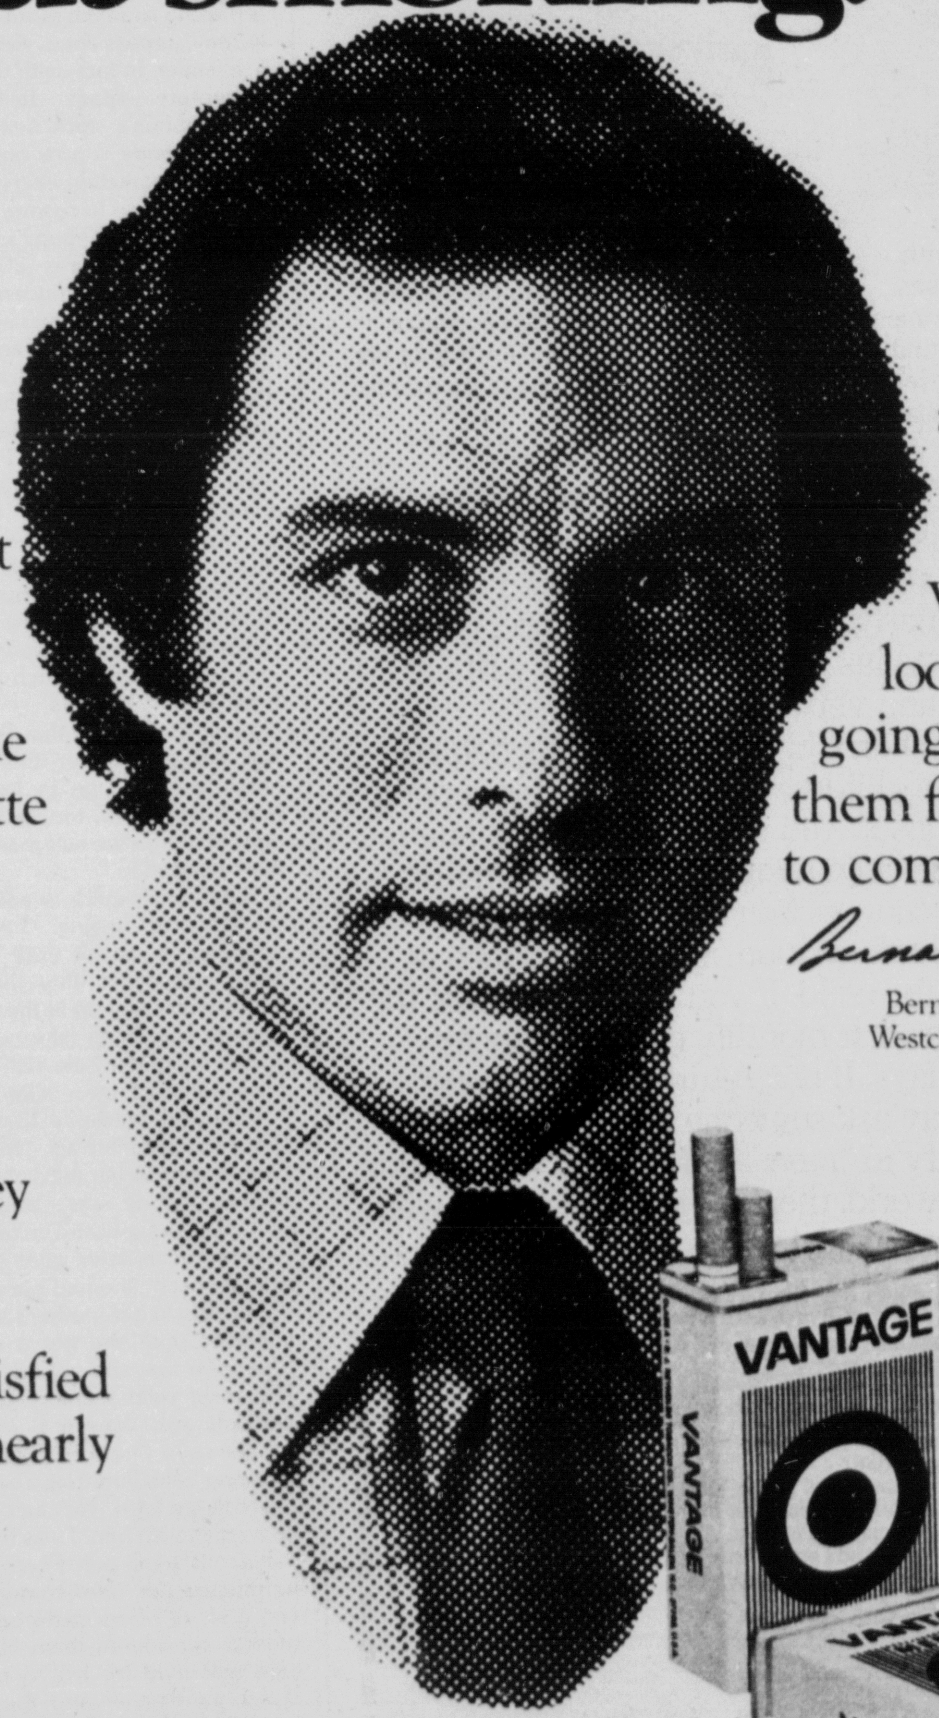
"Vantage is solving a lot of my problems about smoking."



"You see, I really enjoy smoking. To me, it's a pleasure. But it was no pleasure hearing all the things being said against high-tar cigarettes.

"Of course, I used to kid myself a lot about giving up the taste of my old high-tar cigarette for one of those new low-tar brands. But every one I tried left my taste unsatisfied.

"Then someone offered me a Vantage. Sure I'd read about them. But I thought they were like all the others. I was wrong.

"Vantage was right. It satisfied like my old brand. Yet it had nearly half the tar.

"It's been about a year since I started smoking Vantage. And it looks like I'm going to be smoking them for a long time to come."

Froilan lives in the highlands of Guatemala in a one-room hut with dirt floors and no sanitary facilities. Labor there is so cheap that, for men like Froilan's father, hard work and long hours still mean a life of poverty. But now life is changing for Froilan.

Her name? We don't know. We found her wandering the streets of a large city in South America. Her mother is a beggar. What will become of this little girl? No one knows. In her country, she's just one of thousands doomed to poverty.

The world is full of children like these who desperately need someone to care, like the family who sponsors Froilan.

It costs them $15 a month, and it gives Froilan so very much. Now he eats regularly. He gets medical care. He goes to school. Froilan writes to his sponsors and they write to him. They share something very special.

Since 1938 the Christian Children's Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of children. But so many more need your help. Become a sponsor. You needn't send any money now—you can "meet" the child assigned to your care first. Just fill out and mail the coupon. You'll receive the child's photograph, background information, and detailed instructions on how to write to the child. If you wish to sponsor the child, simply send in your first monthly check or money order for $15 within 10 days. If not, return the photo and other materials so we may ask someone else to help.

Take this opportunity to "meet" a child who needs your help. Somewhere in the world, there's a suffering child who will share something very special with you. Love.

For the love of a hungry child.

CARRIE FISHER BLASTS OFF IN "STAR WARS"

The daughter of Debbie and Eddie shares top billing with, among others, a fabulous cast of robots in this year's sleeper hit from Hollywood.

By Peer Oppenheimer

Star Wars, this year's surprise movie hit, is making so much money that it eventually may surpass Jaws, the all-time box- office leader. In fact, with the opening of the adventure space fantasy, Twentieth Century-Fox's stock nearly doubled, and the stampede is now on to use the film's name in marketing everything from comic books and toys to costumes and calendars. There's even a 20-page souvenir program.

The film features 20-year-old Carrie Fisher, who plays Princess Leia, a member of the planet Alderaan's senate and a rebel leader working secretly against the evil Galactic Empire. It is the first leading role for Carrie, who has been through some star wars of her own as the daughter of Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher, who left mother and child to marry the family's best friend, Elizabeth Taylor.

"My parents were divorced when I was about a year and a half," Carrie says. "They got along O.K., but it's never been, 'Eddie, come over, please, Carrie is dying to see you.' He was allowed to see us; he just never did that much. Do you know I have two half-sisters — his children by Connie Stevens — that I've never met? I was with my mother until I was 16. I see her whenever I go to Los Angeles. My father lives there, too, but I still don't see him, although we talk more on the phone than we used to."

But Carrie's quick to add that she had a privileged upbringing. "I never had to do anything. It wasn't until I had my own place and it got dirty that I discovered fairies didn't tidy up in the night. I went to Beverly Hills High [she never graduated] and lived that whole rich-kid syndrome, but somehow I never fit into it."

When she was only 13, her mother put her in her nightclub act. "She found out I'd been singing at bar mitzvahs for a lot of my friends," Carrie says, "and doing horrendous Barbra Streisand imitations."

Three years later, after studying with a drama coach, she had her second taste of the theater in her mother's show Irene. But it wasn't until she got a call to test for Shampoo that she got her first big break. Her most vivid memory of the movie is working with Warren Beatty. "Let's face it," she says, "he sort of knows every girl. I'd never been flirted with before — I mean really flirted with. He can't help it. I think it's a reflex with him. I was flattered."

For this small part Photoplay magazine nominated her "Newcomer of the Year," and a lot of offers came in. She and her mother considered them but decided the time was right for her to receive professional training — and they wanted the best. So in 1974 Carrie was accepted by London's prestigious Central School of Speech and Drama. After 18 months there, she landed the lead in Star Wars and then starred in the televised version of Come Back, Little Sheba with Sir Laurence Olivier and Joanne Woodward.

She now has a $500-a-month apartment in New York but isn't settled. "I don't work all of the time," she says, "and I have to move around a lot, but I don't want to be transitional. I want a house and roots in one place." When not working, she fills her days with piano, language, acting and ballet classes.

Marriage may fit in someday but, she says, "It's really hard to live with somebody. And if both are actors, that's trouble. I would get married only if I really wanted a family, which I don't now because I'm too young to devote myself to anything like that."

Thanks to her experience and training, she has acquired a professional outlook. She even does her own stunts. (In Star Wars she had to swing on a rope across a 30-foot chasm and stand in dank water up to her waist while walls closed in on her.) However, as she disregarded phone calls, forgot to deliver messages, spoke of jaunting off to Australia, Africa and Crazy Horse, Wyo., and vacillated about changing her last name ("It's not because of my father; it just sounds so ordinary.") one wonders just how dedicated she is to a career. "I don't have burning ambition," she admits. "I can't go after jobs. I wait for my agent to call me."

Still, she says she never considered doing anything else. "It was a foregone conclusion that I'd get involved. We had a projection room at home and were steeped in celluloid — like three movies a night. I know people always say this, but I do want to be a good actress. I think I'm more of a character actress than the leading-lady type I play in Star Wars, but I'm just glad to be working at all."

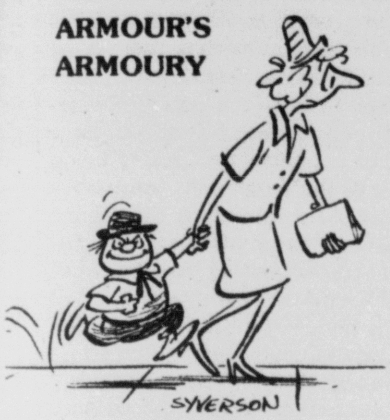
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY



NURSERY RHYME

"Nursery" I find confusing,
One word that has two ways of using.
One is for raising plants in pots,
The other is for raising tots.
One is as quiet as can be—
No screaming from a plant or tree.
The other is all full of noises
Of busy little girls and boyses.
At one I shop, but may not buy
If nothing's pleasing to my eye.
The other's where I pick up Eddie:
No shopping, he is mine already.
—Richard Armour

Mull this one over: The human race has just been called off. Too many spectators — not enough participants. —Robert Orben

The teacher was explaining to her class of 7-year-olds how some jobs lose importance in changing times. "Can anyone tell me what a harness is?" she asked. No answer. "Is there anyone here whose father works with horses?" she persisted. A little boy half-rose from his seat. "My father does," he said. "What does he put on the horse every morning?" the teacher asked. "Every cent he has," replied the little boy. —Lane Olinghouse

IN ALL HUMILITY

I am not too modest, or too humble,
I sometimes criticize and condemn;
I know that I have many faults,
But being wrong is not one of them. —Olga McCoy

Two grandmothers were bragging about their grandchildren. One, quite impressed, asked, "How old are your grandsons?"
"Well," replied the proud grandmama, "the doctor's two and the lawyer's four."

Two kids were shooting the breeze. "I'm going to be a famous surgeon when I grow up." "Not me," his buddy replied. I'm going to be a famous psychiatrist." His friend wanted to know what was wrong with being a surgeon. "Nothing much, but you're not going to catch me washing my hands all the time."

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

While enjoying a cookout, which was a surprise for the children's great-grandmother, we presented her with gifts. Very touched, Grandma began to cry. Our 6-year-old son, not knowing what to think, consoled her quietly, "Don't cry, Grandma, we won't give you anything else."

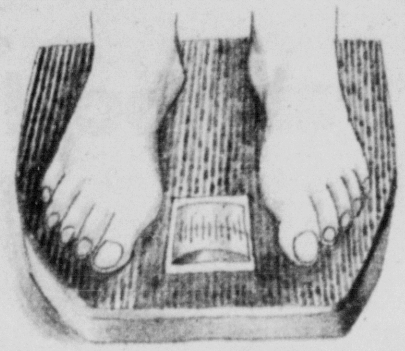
WHAT IN THE WORLD...



Times Not To Diet

We don't want to give you any excuses for postponing that diet you've been meaning to go on, but psychologists say that since overweight people often use food as a means of relieving tension, it may be wise to put off dieting if you're under emotional stress. Dr. George Blackburn, director of a Harvard-affiliate l weight-reduction clinic, says, "It's hard to develop relaxing and pleasure-producing alternatives to eating if you're under a lot of stress." Some of the times when it may be harder to stick to a diet are:

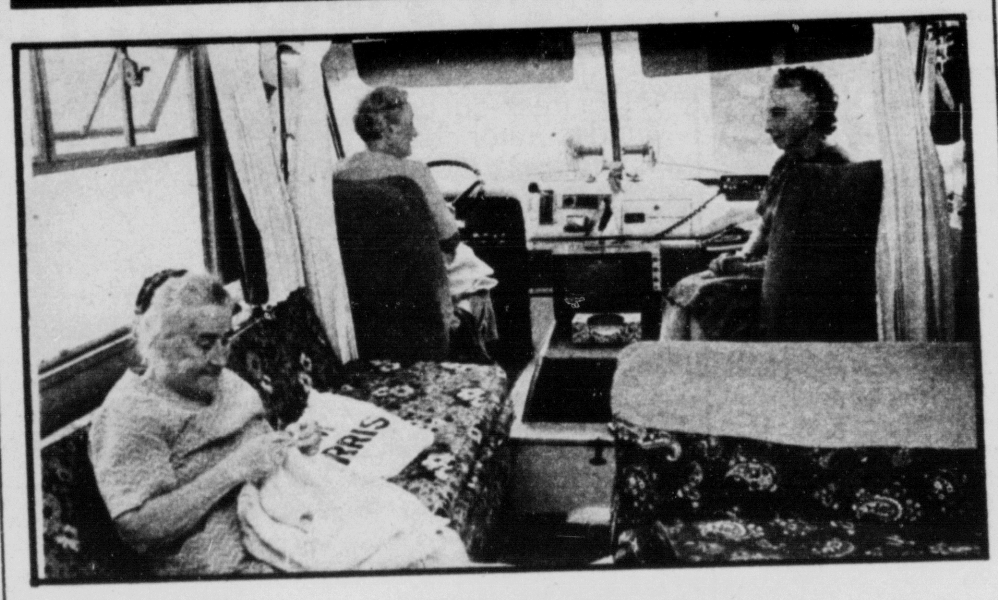
- After the death or serious illness of a family member.
- When looking for or starting a new job.
- During marital problems.
- Just before or after moving.
- While in financial difficulty.

How Salesmen Size You Up

While you're sizing up the cars in the showroom, the salesman is probably sizing you up, according to a recent study at the State Univ. of N.Y. at Buffalo. Dr. Michael Etgar, an asst. professor at the School of Management, says the study showed that automobile salesmen responded differently to prospective customers, depending on their sex and dress. Etgar reports that well-dressed women, especially those who come after business hours, are more likely to get performance information about the automobiles than casually dressed women coming during the day. "Salesmen may have sized up the casually dressed women as housewives who would not be making the actual buying decision," Etgar says. He adds that salesmen are more likely to give the "hard sell" to women than to men.

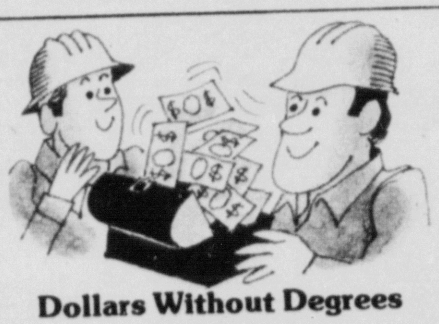
A Refrigerator Is Not A Toy

Everyone knows about the dangers of playing with fire, but abandoned refrigerators can be even more deadly, according to Jean Carlson, a Kansas Univ. Extension specialist in home safety. Most victims of the accidents, she says, are children under 6. To prevent these often-fatal accidents, Ms. Carlson urges parents to teach children that refrigerators are not playthings. Since refrigerators made after October 1958 can be opened from the inside with 15 pounds of pressure, make sure your child knows how to get out if trapped. Tell children to try to help trapped playmates, but to get an adult immediately if they have any problems. If you spot an abandoned refrigerator, either remove the door yourself or have the owner do it.



Trailblazing Trio

Being descendants of pioneer Daniel Boone isn't enough for 3 retired schoolteachers from Maine — they're out blazing trails of their own. The Boone sisters, Mary, Ethel and Florence, all of whom are in their 70's, have spent every summer since 1933 on the road, logging over 144,000 miles in their nationwide travels. Although they've crisscrossed the country several times in their motorhome, the Boones show no signs of slowing down — they're already halfway across the country on their annual summer jaunt. Mary Boone, the chief driver, says the people she and her sisters have met at campsites across the country have been friendly and that they still correspond with many of them. Do the Boones have any tips for less-experienced travelers? "We put thin pieces of foam rubber on the shelves in our motorhome," says Mary. "That way canned goods won't slide around."



Dollars Without Degrees

Some blue-collar workers are making those with white-collar jobs turn green with envy. Labor Department statistics reveal that blue-collar workers are earning more than many of their college-educated, white-collar counterparts. Sixteen percent of the country's 20.2 million full-time blue-collar workers earn $300 a week or more, and 235,000 of them are paid $500 or more. By contrast, half of our teachers earn $227 a week or less, and half of the country's managers and administrators, who often have college degrees, earn $289 a week or less. Sar Levitan, director of George Washington Univ.'s Center for Social Policy Studies, attributes high blue-collar wages to a limited supply of workers: "Unions act to reduce the supply of certain kinds of blue-collar workers, but the supply is also reduced by our overemphasis on longer education, which leads to low esteem for blue-collar jobs."

Sealant Stops Cavities

It's frustrating. Your child brushes his teeth regularly, doesn't eat many sweets...and still gets cavities. Don't give up. Help is on the way in the form of a new tooth sealant that seems to be 100% effective in preventing cavities. The sealant takes a dentist about 20 minutes to brush onto the biting surfaces of back teeth, where most of children's cavities occur. The sealant should prevent cavities for 4 to 5 years by keeping acids formed by trapped food particles from reacting with mouth bacteria to destroy tooth enamel. "Once the sealant is in place, no cavity can form," says Dr. Richard J. Simonsen, a Bloomington, Minn., dentist who has tested the compound on hundreds of children. Sound too good to be true? Well, there is a catch — since the sealant can only be applied on the biting surface of back teeth, the front teeth and spaces between the teeth are still cavity-prone, so hang on to your toothbrush. Dr. John W. Stanford, secretary of the ADA's Council on Dental Materials and Devices, which has given the sealant provisional approval for use by the general public, says, "Short-term clinical testing shows the material to be effective...but you have to remember, since it can only be used on the back teeth, it has to be part of an overall dental hygiene program."

Quick Takes

Breakfast is often an eat-and-run affair, but it seems many Americans are doing the running without the eating. A recent Roper survey reports that ⅓ of Americans miss breakfast, and 20% skip lunch....If you're observing the nationwide 55-mile-an-hour speed limit, chances are you're being passed says the American Automobile Assn. The AAA estimates that more than 70% of the traffic on U.S. interstate highways is moving between 55 and 65 mph, and much of the rest is traveling even faster.... The familiar one-family house is increasingly becoming the one-person house. Real-estate brokers across the country say that growing numbers of singles are buying their own homes. Nearly ⅓ of the home buyers surveyed by one Calif. firm were unmarried, and in some choice areas as many as ⅔ of the homeowners were singie....Seems like the girdle industry is feeling the pinch. A nationwide study says that girdle use has dropped by 50% in the last 8 years.

Sleuthing With Hypnosis

Law-enforcement officials have a new weapon in their fight against crime — hypnosis. The FBI and police departments in more than two dozen states, including Calif., Fla., N.Y. and Texas, are using hypnosis as part of their investigation of certain cases. Dr. Martin Reiser, director of behavioral science services for the Los Angeles Police Department, says, "Essentially, we use hypnosis as a memory-refresher technique on volunteer witnesses and victims — never on suspects. It helps the person recall information that may have been repressed due to trauma and anxiety." According to Reiser, 90% of the information obtained during hypnosis is later corroborated by police investigation. Special agent Howard Teten, supervisor of the FBI's Behavioral Science Unit, says hypnosis has contributed useful information to several bureau investigations.
